Singer may run for Senate nomination

SPRINGFIELD — The unprecedented infighting in the top ranks of the Democratic Party took a new turn Friday when former Chicago Ald. William Singer hinted he might decide to resurrect his campaign for the party's U.S. Senate nomination.

Singer is being urged to renew his campaign, which started and ended during last months three-week slate-making process, at a time when some organization Democrats are trying to orchestrate a now statewide slate.

The uproar threatens to put the party's underdog slate of statewide candidates further behind the eight ball.

Besides the possible rejuvenation of the Singer effort, the past week has seen:

- U.S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., suggest that two candidates remove themselves from the ticket:
- Sec. of State Alan J. Dixon declare he is for Alan J. Dixon and no one else in the March primary;
- Comptroller Michael J. Bakalis, the party's leading candidate for governor, caught in a crossfire over the Stevenson and Dixon moves;
- Former Gov. Daniel Walker, once regarded as a party maverick, come out for the two candidates Stevenson wants ousted;
- Several members of the Democratic state central committee handy about a variety of counterattack measures, including possible legislative action to abolish the state central committee.

SINGER SAID Friday he has not yet retreated from his promise not to oppose Hinsdale attorney Alex Seith, the party's slated candidate for the U.S. Senate nomination to run against Charles Percy next November.

Singer said, however, "It is safe to say I am listening to people who are urging me to run. I will decide by the middle of next week what we should do, or if there is anything to do."

The former independent Chicago alderman, who was beaten soundly in the 1975 mayoral primary, said he has talked to Stevenson about his renewed interest in the Senate race.

"I think that would be a natural thing to do," Singer said. adding that the Senator did not encourage or discourage him.

THE ROOT of the party's problems focus on the slating of Metropolitan Sanitary District Commissioners Richard Troy and Jerome Cosentino for attorney general and state treasurer, respectively.

Most suburban and Downstate party leaders did not want to slate the two MSD commissioners but they were outgunned by Chicago Democrats.

The Dixon-Stevenson effort is not believed to be coordinated, although they are close political allies.

The pair's pronouncements, however, could be viewed as either an effort to force a change in the slate or encouragement to persons like Singer or State Rep. Richard Luft, D-Pekin, who is considering a primary race against Chicagoan Roland Burris for comptroller.

WHILE SOME party observers don't forsee any changes in the slate, there is agreement that the turmoil has been destructive to attempts at party unity.

There are no clear signs the discord will heal itself in the coming week. Candidates can begin filing nominating petitions for the 1978 elections on Dec. 12.

It is unlikely another state central committee will be called before that time and some believe another meeting might not produce any changes.

"I don't believe in getting involved in anything that can't produce the changes," siad the Rev. James Wall of Elmhurst, a member of the committee.

State Rep. John Matijevich, D-North Chicago, tends to agree, but hinted he might not let the matter drop.

"I may just introduce legislation to abolish the central committee. This has just been an embarrassment," he said.

Commodity firm tied to frauds

by TONI GINNETTI

A commodity brokerage firm that has been refused the federal registration required for it to operate is soliciting area businessmen to buy commodity options.

The firm, Lloyd, Carr and Co., has solicited the businessmen by telephone to purchase sugar options on foreign markets though the Commodity Futures Trading Commission has refused repeatedly to issue the firm the required federal license.

The Boston-based firm, which opened a Chicago office in October, also is operating despite a court-imposed federal restraining order issued Nov. 7 prohibiting it from engaging in fraudulent commodity sales practices.

THE DAILY HERALD has learned area businessmen are among those who the firm randomly has "cold canvassed" by telephone offering sugar

FRANK KNUDSEN (left) and Anton Stieb are all dressed up with no place to go. The two Rolling Meadows men have played Santa and Jolly, the chief elf, for 19 years to the patients at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights. This year they won't be able to make it because a fire destroyed the gifts they had collected. They still are hoping for "a guardian angel."

Fire empties Santa's bag of gifts

by RUTH MUGALIAN

Christmas Eve won't be the same this year for Anton Stieb and Frank Knudsen.

It will be the first time in 19 years the two Rolling Meadows men have not spent the day before Christmas in the hospital.

"It will be quite a let down, it really will," Knudsen said. "It makes Christmas. Everything else is anti-climactic."

KNUDSEN AND STIEB have visited Northwest Community Hospital every year since it opened. With Knudsen, 51, dressed as Santa Claus and Stieb, 61, as Jolly, the chief elf, the two men walked from room to room dispensing candy, gag gifts and toys. No patient was left without a Christmas greeting and a present.

Before the hospital was built, the two men played Santa to shut-ins and the elderly in Rolling Meadows.

But this year Santa and his helper won't be making the rounds at the hospital. Last May a fire started by an arsonist destroyed Stieb's garage and, with it, his props and gifts he had been collecting throughout the year. He estimates about $100 worth of toys were lost.

Originally Stieb and Knudsen were financed by the Rolling Meadows Jaycees. But every year Stieb put in more of his own money until last year he financed the entire project.

"I ALWAYS FUNDED part of the program myself because I feel so strongly about it," Stieb said. "But this (the fire) kind of wiped me out. And this is a year-round project. I shop throughout the year and look for bargains."

Although they say it will be difficult to put the act together this late in the year, Knudsen said they still are hoping for "a guardian angel."

Stieb has gone to various organizations looking for help, but he said so far no one is interested.

"The toys and the games I suppose we could swing, but before we do that we'd have to know where the wherewithall is coming from, Knudsen said. "It started out as a small project, but now, you know how big that hospital is and we don't leave any room without a gift."

THE TWO MEN seem to feel the loss is more theirs than the hospital patients'.

"We always got more than we gave," Stieb said several times. "there were some touching moments. Remember little Debbie?"

Debbie was a mentally retarded child who died two days after Santa and Jolly visited her. The two men had taken her picture and gave it to the parents.

"It turned out to be the only picture the parents had of her," Stieb said. "After that we started taking pictures of all the children with a Polaroid and giving them to them."

This year they said they will dress up and drop in on some elderly or sick friends on Christmas Eve. But it won't be quite the same.

"I think Tony (Stieb) kind of summed it up when we were getting dressed," Knudsen said. "You know we're all dressed up with no place to go. It kind of gets the adrenalin going. It will be quite a let down."

No guilt over Biko

PRETORIA, South Africa (UPI) — A South African judge ruled Friday that no one was responsible through "acts or omissions" for the death from brain injuries in a jail cell of black leader Steve Biko.

The United States said it was "shocked" at the verdict and that it was "inconceivable . . . that no one was responsible." A British member of Parliament called the verdict "outragous" and said th Biko family should "fear for their lives."

Police arrested Biko's brother Kaya and five other friends, including two priests, in a predawn swoop on their homes hours before the verdict was read.

A BIKO FAMILY lawyer, Shun Chetty, said he was told the arrests "had something to do with pamphlets" but that no charges had been filed. Biko himself had been held in jail without charges in connection with antigovernment pamphlets at the time of his death.

Biko died of severe brain injuries, resulting in kidney failure, in the Pretoria jail after 24 days of detention. He had been kept stripped naked, shackled and handcuffed through interrogations in Port Elizabeth and later driven naked and manacled 750 miles to Pretoria during the night only hours before his death.

He was at the time the 20th black to die in police custody since March, 1976.

Pretoria's chief magistrate, Martinus Prins, delivered his 4-minute verdict at the end of a 14-day inquest into Biko's death.

"The available evidence does not prove the death was brought about by any act or ommission involving an offense by any person," Prins said in a four-minute statement.

HUNDREDS OF blacks who packed the Old Synagogue courtroom heard the verdict in stunned silence, then filed outside to hold a demonstration in the courtyard. The blacks gave the Bardwell's lesson passed by

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI

Roger Bardwell is a classic case of a man marching to the beat of a different drummer.

At a time when dramatic enrollment declines have spurred board of education members to call for school closings, the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 superintendent is arguing that "small schools are better" and should be kept open.

At a time when low standardized test scores have prompted the board to set skill standards for promotion, Bardwell said students' creativity and ability to work with others is the real indicator of future success.

ALTHOUGH THE board is pushing for stronger central leadership to make principals and teachers more accountable, Bardwell said most decisions should be made by the local school staffs that have to live with them.

Roger Bardwell

Time and again Bardwell's liberal educational philosophies put him at odds with the more conservative prevailing forces on the board and he admits sooner or later he will have to choose whether to stay or leave.

In the meantime, there is a deep-seated distrust between the board and Bardwell's administration. Knowing how different his philosophies are from their's, the majority of board members is leery of how Bardwell carries out newly adopted policies.

THE END RESULT of the mistrust is that the board is usurping much of the decision-making that is normally left to the professional educators, angering teachers and administrators alike.

The atmosphere of suspicion is especially frustrating for Bardwell, who believes he can be trusted to effectively carry out the board's policies despite his divergent beliefs.

"As long as an issue is still open for discussion I'm going to tell everyone where I come from, but once the policy is adopted I'm going to do what I can to carry it out effectively," he said.

BARDWELL READILY admits he has not had much success bringing the board around to his way of thinking.

"It's a dead-end street," he said. "I haven't gained an inch."

There was a time however, when Bardwell's ideas did have the support of his board and brought the district national recognition for its "innovative" educational programs.

That was back in the early 1960s when liberalism in education was in Lost woman's husband quizzed by grand jury

by KEN VANDERBEEK

The husband of a missing Palatine woman and former employe of his firm have appeared before a Cook County Grand Jury in connection with his wife's disappearance in October, The Daily Herald has learned.

Edward J. Lyng, 45, 1328 E. Sanborn Ave., head of the Lyng Canteen Services Co., Elgin, was questioned earlier this week before the grand jury about the disappearance of his wife, Stephanie, 39, missing since Oct. 25, authorities said.

Christine Rezba, 1301 Cottonwood Ln., Mount Prospect, the former employe, also was questioned Wednesday before the grand jury. Ms. Rezba was employed up until about five months ago as a field representative for the company, a supplier of vending machines, a former co-worker said Friday.

DETAILS OF the grand jury testimony and Ms. Rezba's role in the case were not disclosed.

Lyng has been questioned by police three times about his wife's disappearance before his appearance before the grand jury, authorities said.

Police have refused to disclose details of the conversations but said Lyng told them his wife had filed a divorce suit against him charging mental cruelty. Lyng said divorce proceedings were in a preliminary stage shortly before his wife's disappearance.

2 nabbed in stealing of furniture

by DANN GIRE

A large amount of furniture stolen from a model apartment in Mount Prospect was found Friday in the apartment of two men.

Allan Vinson, 21, and Michael Powell, 18, both of 1320 E. Elmhurst Rd., were charged with possession of stolen property allegedly taken Oct. 30 from a model apartment at Alpine Apartments, 1821 Golf Rd., Mount Prospect.

Mount Prospect and Des Plaines police confiscated several rooms full of furniture after it was identified by an Alpine employe. Police said the furniture included a queen-sized bed, kitchen chairs and table, couch and loveseat and dressers with mirrors. Two trucks were used to cart the furniture to the Mount Prospect police station. No estimate was placed on the value of the furniture.

Vinson and Powell also were charged with burglary after police recovered several uncashed checks in the apartment from St. Raymond's Church, 311 S. I-Oka Ave., Mount Prospect. The church had been burglarized Nov. 24 when thieves took the checks and $400 in cash.

Police also recovered several items allegedly stolen from Des Plaines businesses.

Vinson and Powell also were charged with possession of marijuana. Detectives Robert Barone and Robert Gibson, Mount Prospect police, handled the investigation.

Commodities firm linked to trading fraud

options costing from $2,000 to $8,000. The firm says the options could bring later profits on the London commodities market.

Options and futures are the components of the commodities market on which agricultural products and metals are traded. A future is a commitment to buy or sell a given commodity, with the price of commodity at the time of the trade deciding the profit or loss for the trader.

An option is a right to buy or sell a future contract.

Trading of sugar options is prohibited on U.S. markets, compounding the risk involved for persons who agree to buy the options, according to CFTC trail attorney Arthur Holtzman.

So speculative is the business that federal law requires options brokers to clearly spell out to buyers the risks involved before options can be sold, Holtzman said.

THE NATIONWIDE Lloyd Carr firm, which opened in July, 1976 in Boston, is billed as the largest option broker in the country but has been embroiled in legal battles with the CFTC almost since its inception.

Jim Carr, president of the firm, confirmed Friday that the company has continued to operate because it has appealed the CFTC'S registration denial to the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New York.

The appeal has yet to be decided.

The CFTC regulates all commodity brokers, and federal law requires brokers be registered by the commission.

The CFTC last January refused the firm's application for registration because of irregularities in its bookkeeping, Holtzman said.

THE FIRM appealed the decision and continued to solicit nationwide. In February, the CFTC sought a temporary restraining order against the firm in U.S. District Court in Boston, but the request was denied pending the appeals court decision.

A subsequent request for a preliminary injunction against the firm also was denied, Holtzman said.

The CFTC then moved to intervene in action that had been started against the firm in Michigan where the state attorney general filed suit against the firm, Holtzman said.

The commission had the matter transferred to a federal court in Detroit where a judge on Nov. 7 granted a temporary restraining order enjoining the firm from fraudulent sales practices.

Bob Boraks, chief trail counsel for the CFTC, said hearings also were held last week in Detroit on a request for a preliminary injunction against the firm, but the request has yet to be decided.

Actions against the firm also were brought by state officials in Indiana and Texas but were later dropped, according to Carr.

CARR DEFENDED the company's operations, saying it has "thousands of customers throughout the country" and has a net worth "well into seven figures."

Carr admitted the company has made out-of-court settlements with some clients who have sued the firm, although he said no court judgments have been entered against it.

He called the CFTC's prosecution of the firm "a vendetta" arising from the firm's successful challenge in October of a planned CFTC regulation on options sales, adding that the company has several lawsuits pending against the CFTC charging harassment and slander.

But Holtzman and Boraks said pending CFTC actions surround federal violations of the Commodities Exchange Act.

"We know they're continuing their operations," Holtzman said. "We tell everyone that they are not registered and they are violating the law."

Sen. Humphrey honored at $1,000-a-plate dinner

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Saying he was "proud to be president of a nation that loves a man like Hubert Humphrey," President Carter joined more than 2,000 politicians and celebrities Friday night hailing the cancer-stricken Minnesota senator.

The crown paid $1,000 a plate and more for a dinner that raised $7 million to help finance a new Hubert H. Humphrey Institute for Public Affairs at the University of Minnesota.

Humphrey's terminal cancer reportedly had worsened during the week, but, a few minutes before Carter arrived, the frail senator showed up at the festive Washington Hilton Hotel affair with a big smile on his face.

THE GOVERNORS of 40 states, including Illinois, had proclaimed Friday "Hubert Humphrey Day" as part of the nationwide fundraising drive for the $20 million study institute, and the president joined in the tribute.

"All of the attributes that I love in America are residing in him," Carer said. "I'm proud to be president of a nation that loves a man like Hubert Humphrey."

Carter recalled that he was in the Navy when in 1948 he first heard of Humphrey, then the mayor of Minneapolis and a vocal advocate of a civil rights plank in the Democratic platform.

He said he first met someone in Humphrey's family in 1964 when Humphrey was Lyndon Johnson's running mate and Carter's mother, Lillian, headed their campaign effort in Sumter County, Ga.

Humphrey's wife, Muriel, came

to Georgia for a reception in a small town, Carter said, but she refused to attend until she was assured that black women were invited.

CARTER SAID his sister Gloria, told Mrs. Humphrey that blacks were present. But actually, Carter said, "the maids just took off their aprons for the occasion. She didn't know it, but that was the first integrated reception in south Georgia."

Carter said his daughter, Amy, had disliked nearly every politician but took an instant liking to Humphrey.

Still, Carter said, his deepest impressions of Humphrey came this year.

He called Humphrey a "good, good friend" who has given much sound and wise advice in the operations of the White House.

When Carter quit speaking, he leaped from the stage to clasp Humphrey's hand and embrace the senator.

Vice President Walter Mondale and his wife, Joan, also attended the dinner, as did a host of Senate and House members of both parties and administration officials.

Frank Sinatra headlined a card of hour-long entertainment with Alan King as master of ceremonies and joined by Helen Reddy.

Actor Lorne Greene recited in his rumbling bass the lyrics to "My Way," an inspirational song in which a man near the end of his road sums up his life's credo.

LYRICIST Sammy Cahn reworded the Sinatra hit song to make it a specific tribute to Humphrey.

The Humphrey Institute at Minnesta, the senator's alma mater, will offer special programs in political and social studies. It also will house an office for the senator and archives holding memorabilia from his 30-year political career.

Ground-breaking ceremonies for the institute are scheduled for July.

L.A. keeps fearful watch for 'Hillside stranglers'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Apprehension and fear haunted the Los Angeles metropolitan area Friday as police pressed their hunt for the "Hillside stranglers" wanted for the sex-killings of 10 women and girls.

"You can definitely feel it," said Virgil Hanks, security supervisor at Occidental College, a small liberal arts school tucked away in the hillsides only a mile from where the nude and strangled body of the 10th victim was found earlier this week.

"This is not a relaxed campus like it was before," he said. "The feeling of apprehension, fear and nervousness is not only felt among the students but the faculty and staff as well."

FOR THE PAST six years the school has run an escort service for women students to accompany them back to their dormitories after dark.

"Before the killings began, we got an average of 12 to 14 calls a night," Hanks said. "But since the last victim was found we are getting up to 65 requests per night."

Police said they had received at least 120 "good leads" from citizens in attempts to track down the killer or killers "but none has resulted in any breakthroughs," according to Cmdr. William Booth.

Lt. Edwin Henderson, head of the 42-man Hillside Stranglers Task Force, revealed that a woman who witnessed the abduction of the latest victim — Laura Rae Wagner, 18 — was hypnotized last Wednesday night by a police expert.

HENDERSON REFUSED to divulge the nature of the information obtained from the witness, but said it was helpful and was being checked out.

Neighbors said they saw two men force Miss Wagner out of her car only doors away from her Sepulveda home, then take her into their own car and drive off. Her body was found the following day about 30 miles away in the Glassell Park area.

The bodies of 13 young women and girls have been found in the Los Angeles metropolitan area during the past two months, but police have linked only 10 of the slayings because of their similarities.

The victims, ranging in age from 12 to 28, were found nude, most sexually molested, abandoned in isolated areas besides roads, and all strangled.

REWARDS TOTALING $115,000 have been posted by the county government, a television station and an attorney for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killers.

"I fear for my sister," said Carol Maschimerier, 37, a Santa Monica switchboard operator. "I've seen pictures of the girls and she looks so much like them. She's 22 and I tell her not to go out alone. I nag all the girls I know not to hitchhike or go out alone."

In the Glandale and Highland Park areas, where most of the victims were found, some women were carrying photographs of an artist's sketch of one possible suspect in the case. The photo, released last week by Glendale police, shows a male latin or caucasian who was seen in the car of one of the victim's the night before she disappeared.

Some women talked of buying guard dogs, deadbolt locks or even guns to protect themselves.

DIANA FASANO, 24, said she keeps a big pop bottle next to her bed at home to use as a club if necessary.

"If they can do that to a 12-year-old, they'd do it to someone younger," said the mother of a 6-year-old girl.

"Any parent who would let a teenage girl out alone in this area would have to have their head examined. Each time you hear about one more, it gives you a weirder feeling."

In Santa Monica, police have posted a 20 inch-by-24 inch poster at an intersection where one of the victims, Kathleen Robinson, 17, was last seen alive while apparently hitchhiking to her home.

Executions cause riots in Bermuda

HAMILTON, Bermuda (UPI) — Bermuda sent two black convicted murderers to the gallows at dawn Friday and declared a state of emergency and a curfew to curb a rampage of riot and bombing by blacks protesting the first island executions in 34 years.

The hanging of Erskine Durant "Buck" Burrows and Larry Winfield Tacklyn, both 33, was carried out at the seclusion of Case Mates Prison, 10 miles west of this resort island capital city.

Burrows, who claimed he headed a black power organization called the Black Cadre Anti-Colonialists, was convicted of killing five men, including Bermuda's governor and its police chief. Tacklyn was sentenced to die for killing two supermarket owners.

AFTER THE Inter-Islands Appeals Court — Bermuda's highest tribunal — turned down a last appeal Thursday night, hundreds of rioters took to the streets, smashing shop windows with pipes and axes and setting at least two fires with molotov cocktails.

The governor of Bermuda, Sir Peter Ramsbotham, declared a state of emergency and a 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew Friday for at least the next two nights. The curfew affects all those on the island, including thousands of tourists.

Ramsbotham said the state of emergency was caused by the "tragic events of last night."

At the same time the 300 men of the Bermuda Regiment, a part-time army similar to the National Guard, was mobilized to provide backup for the police.

Hamilton, a city of just over 10,000, was reported calm in the hours following the hangings Friday. Approximately 60 per cent of the island's population is black.

In the Thursday night violence, rioters set fires in a government building and a high school and at one point seized a bus and rammed it into a wall.

clenched fist black power salute and chanted, "They have killed Steve Biko." A score of policiemen watched but took no action. There were no incidents.

Stunned by the announcement, Ntsiki Biko, the black activist's widow left the court declining comment saying, "I'm too depressed."

At the United Nations, U.S. spokesman Tom Offenburger issued a statement on behalf of the State Dept. that said:

"We were shocked by the verdict in the face of compelling evidence that at the least Steve Viko was the victim of flagrant neglect and irresponsibility. It seems inconceivable on the evidence presented that the inquest could render a judgement that no one was responsible."

In London, Labor member of Parliament Robert Hughes, chairman of Britain's antiapartheid committee, condemned the verdict as the "most outrageous miscarriage of justice I've ever heard of."

"I am equally horrified to learn that Steve Biko's brother and cousin were arrested during the early hours of this morning and if I was a member of the Biko family I would fear for their lives," Hughes said.

Linda Dickstein a helper who suddenly needs help

by THEA GRENDAHL

Linda Dickstein helped out at the Salvation Army when she was a young girl growing up in Chicago.

The thought of going back to them now, this time asking for help instead of offering her help, is crushing her.

She remembers the kind of people who sought a meal or a bed at the Salvation Army: Drunks, half-crazed old men, deserted mothers and children.

SHE COULD afford to help them, the sad, sick individuals she served. Her family owned a restaurant on Lincoln Avenue, and she was more than comfortable.

It hurts her, being on the needy side now.

But it hurts more to have her sons suffering, sick and homeless.

Nine-year-old Tracy is a quiet, bright boy. He has severe asthma, which has led to three cases of double pneumonia in the last six months.

Bo, 6, has almost recovered from open heart surgery earlier this fall.

LIFE WAS BEARABLE while they lived in Schaumburg, even with the sickness and money problems.

A friend was helping out with the rent, and Linda was trying to work to make it on her own. She was in line for a manager's job at Bernard's wig store at the Woodfield Shopping Center.

She worried about the interruptions at work when the boys got sick, or when she was plagued with epilepsy and back problems. When she rushed from work one day last July to take Tracy to the hospital after an asthma attack, her employer told her not to come back.

She was left to pay the rent by herself, without a job. People from county and township public aid offices told her not to work, to sign up for total disability and wait for the checks, which they said might come in six months, a year, never.

TRACY'S ASTHMA kept getting worse.

"The doctor told me to get him out of the state," Mrs. Dickstein said. So three weeks ago, when she knew she could not make the rent payments, she listened to a friend who packed the family's belongings in a truck and promised to take them to Arizona, where Tracy could breathe and a job was waiting for Linda. Listening to him was her biggest mistake, she said.

She got as far as Belleville when Tracy came down with double pneumonia and was hospitalized for a week.

LINDA DICKSTEIN and her sons, Tracy, left, and Bo, right, try to sort out the maze of problems that have beset them since they had to leave their Schaumburg home three weeks ago.

There she realized that the friend's talk of Arizona was only a dream. A cousin came to take the truck back to Chicago.

While washing out Bo's clothes one night, Mrs. Dickstein suffered a slipped disc and a pinched nerve in her back and joined Tracy in the hospital.

A week ago she signed herself out of the hospital against doctor's orders and returned to Chicago to collect her belongings and start over.

BUT NOW MRS. Dickstein, the former Salvation Army volunteer, the PTA member who found foster homes for abused children, the volunteer who staffed phones for charity telethons, can't find anyone to help her.

The truck with all the family's clothes and furniture, was broken into and towed in by the rental company.

She has no one to help her claim her things, nowhere to put them if she had them. A cousin, June Eiden, had let the Dicksteins stay at her apartment in Skokie but the landlord won't let them stay.

Mrs. Dickstein can't understand why she, always the self-sufficient, helping person, is helpless now. She's trying to find somewhere else to sleep tonight besides her car.

Girl to host network sports show

People

Diane Mermigas

• Allyson Johnson, 13, may well be the youngest host of a national network program when she joins John Brodie this Saturday on NBC's new "Football's Red Dogs, Fumbles, Flankers and Flickers." The show is designed to take a unique look at all the aspects of football children find most interesting. Allyson is, however, a seasoned professional. She is currently in her second season cohosting WMAQ-TV's weekly children's magazine program "Bubblegum Digest," which is produced in Chicago.

• Officials at the Rose Valley Youth Center in Longview, Wash., ignored a plain white envelope when it came in the mail at first. After all, they were busy preparing for a celebrity auction to raise funds for playground equipment. Someone finally noticed and opened the envelope to find a $1,000 check from Frank Sinatra in it — an amount that covers the cost of just about all the playground equipment needed.

• John Chancellor confirmed Friday what has been rumored for weeks — that he soon will be leaving his post as anchorman of the "NBC Nightly News," but not leaving the network. He will take on the job of senior correspondent at major news events and news commentator several times a week on the weeknight newscast. Tom Brokaw, host of NBC's "Today" show, is the top contender for the nightly newscast anchor seat.

• Keith Richard, lead guitarist of the Rolling Stones rock group, pleaded not guilty Friday to drug charges that could send him to prison for life. Richard, 33, dressed in a navy blue suit and with a gold earring through his left earlobe, sat silently through a preliminary hearing Friday in Toronto that will determine if and when he goes to trial. He was charged in February with possessing nearly an ounce of heroin for the purpose of trafficking and five grams of cocaine.

Ban on nuclear shipping at O'Hare

Chicago Mayor Michael A. Bilandic said Friday no more nuclear fuel will be shipped through O'Hare Airport unless a study by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission rules such shipments are safe. Bilandic said the study will "move expeditiously." "They (the NRC staff) assured me there's no harm in the transportation of the material, no health hazard from possible radioactivity, no potential for explosions and more than adequate security against possible sabotage," Bilandic said.

Brock supports flights to Midway

Transportation Sec. Brock Adams urged the Civil Aeronautics Board Friday to approve quickly low-fare flights by a new airline linking Midway Airport in Chicago with six other cities in the Midwest. Adams said the operations proposed by Midway Arlines would help ease congestion at the nation's busiest airport — O'Hare field in Chicago — and would for the first time in 20 years add a new scheduled airline to the U.S. transportation system. "It is time to encourage new competition in this industry and to reward those companies which are willing and able to meet all safety requirements while at the same time experimenting with low-fare concepts," Adams said. The Transportation Department request, filed formally with the CAB and announced in a news conference, is part of an administration effort to reduce consumer air fares both domestically and on international flights.

Hotel manager stabbed 17 times

A reservations manager at the Ritz Carlton Hotel was stabbed 17 times Friday for no apparent reason. All of the stab wounds inflicted on Carol Steward, 33, were superficial, authorities said. She was treated at Northwestern Hospital and released. Police arrested Venelene Soldana, 27, who was being shown an 18th floor room she had reserved when she stabbed Mrs. Steward, investigators said. A 10-inch knife was recovered.

Canteen said to underpay $250,000

Investigators for the Cook County State's Attorney's office said Friday that Airline Canteen Corp. may have underpaid the city more than $250,000 in rent over the last three years alone on its concessions contract at O'Hare Airport. Investigators arrived at the new estimate after studying data compiled by Arthur Andersen & Co., which is making a special audit for the city, and examining records from a West Chicago bank account where proceeds withheld from the city were believed to have been deposited, an investigator said. Arline Canteen and its owner Walter J. Henely are accused of concealing half of monthly proceeds from the concessions, believed to total $2 million over the last three years, in a special account at the First National Bank of West Chicago.

$30,000 jewel theft in Hinsdale

Two men with pistols stole about $30,000 worth of jewelry and $600 in cash from a Hinsdale home Friday after handcuffing a man and his wife and binding their son with tape, authorities said. Thomas Grant, owner of the house, said the two were equipped with gloves, handcuffs, tape and a briefcase and knew how to circumvent the home's security system. "There's no question, these guys were pros," he said.

Illinois briefs

Thompson backs sales tax cut

Gov. James R. Thompson Friday endorsed a plan to reduce the sales tax by $75 million on industrial production equipment in Illinois. Thompson told a news conference the tax on productive equipment is a double tax, since the businessman is taxed when he buys the equipment and taxed again for owning equipment under the corporate personal property levy. The sales tax break is incorporated in several bills now before the General Assembly. Thompson said the state cannot afford the full $75 million cut in a single year and will have to phase it in during a three-to seven-year period. Richard L. Thomas, chairman of the Illinois Fiscal Commission and president of the First National Bank of Chicago, said such a law would be an important selling point to attract new business to the state.

Save old license plates: Dixon

Sec. of State Alan J. Dixon said Friday motorists who have put on their 1978 license plates should destroy their 1977 plates or hold onto them until Dec. 31, when they are no longer valid. Dixon said every year many owners prematurely throw away their still valid old plates and find overtime parking tickets charged to them.

Elections board change expected

Keeping his promise, Gov. James R. Thompson is expected to announce today that he has used his amendatory veto powers to alter the state board of elections. The governor has scheduled a morning press conference where he is expected to announce he has amended the bill, which expands the board from four to eight members, so that he appoints all eight members. The governor publicly has objected to the legislation, sponsored by Illinois House Speaker William Redmond, D-Bensenville, which gives the governor the power to appoint four members, but allows the highest ranking state official of the opposite political party the right to appoint the other four. Action on the election board was made necessary by the Illinois Supreme Court, which declared the present board unconstitutional.

For $22 million African nation gets an emperor

BANGUI, Central African Empire (UPI) — Jean Bedel Bokassa, 56-year-old ruler of this agricultural nation, will be crowned the world's newest emperor Sunday in an extravagant ceremony that will include a two-ton throne, 450 pounds of rose petals and a crown encrusted with 2,000 diamonds.

The coronation is pricetagged at $22 million in this landlocked country where the average annual income is $122.

Bokassa, a veteran of the French colonial army who has ruled the nation for 11 years, will become His Imperial Majesty Bokassa I, in ceremonies at Bangui's municipal sports stadium.

HE WILL SIT atop a 6-foot-high, 40-foot wide throne that was airfreighted here by a propellor-driven aircraft because it was too bulky to fit into the sleeker, modern jets.

Feverish last-minute preparations were under way in Bangui, famous as a center for exotic butterflies, insects and hunting, and in Paris, where artisans produced everything necessary for the coronation.

Four hundred fifty pounds of rose petals and 48,000 bottles of wine were among the final French furnishings airfreighted Friday to Bangui.

The rose petals will be tossed under the feet of the emperor and empress at the coronation.

On today's flight to Bangui will be a cake for the 1,500 guests at the coronation party. The eight-layered cake, 4 feet high and 3 feet wide, is supported by columns of chocolate topped by the emblem of Bokassa's empire, an eagle mounted on a sun.

The coronation threatens to outshine even Africa's last royal inauguration in 1930 when the late Emperor Haili Selassie was named Emperor of Ethiopa, King of Kings and the Lion of Judah, all to the accompaniment of music from the British Royal Marine Band from the warship Effinghan.

Ford, Reagan, Jackson owe U.S. campaign funds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It has been well over a year now since Ronald Reagan ended his 1976 presidential bid, and the government still hasn't asked him to return more than a half million dollars in taxpayers' surplus federal campaign funds.

Former President Gerald R. Ford also owes the government about $83,000, Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., about $21,000 and George Wallace $2,000.

During the interim, Reagan and Ford have put the funds in the bank and are drawing interest. The interest goes to their campaign committees — not to the government.

THE MONEY Reagan and the others owe represents unused campaign funds the government gave presidential candidates in 1976. The law says left-over money has to be returned, but the Federal Election Commission's audit process has not yet been completed, so the candidates have just kept the money.

The auditing delays have been caused by a variety of problems arising from the fact that 1976 was the first time the government helped finance presidential elections, according to FEC spokesman David Fiske.

"Everyone had a lot of learning to do," Fiske said. He said the Reagan audit should be completed within a month and Ford and the others shortly thereafter.

President Carter's audit hasn't been completed either, but his campaign ended in the red.

WHEN FORD defeated Reagan for the Republican nomination in August 1976, the former governor of California had about $1.6 million in unused funds.

Because 36 per cent of Regan's $14.2 million in campaign receipts came from federal matching money, 36 per cent of his surplus or more than $500,000 is owed the government.

Ford had a surplus of about $500,000, but campaign reports show it has been cut in half as bills were paid this year. He got 33 per cent of his money from the government, and will owe about $83,000 of the remaining $253,000.

Women relax—then go for the eyes

"IF THAT DOESN'T break somebody's knee, come and see me," says Mike Todhunter as he coaches Rachel Salinas, Hoffman Estates, in self-defense.

by THEA GRENDAHL

It almost looked like a ballet class — the line of women kicking first one leg, then the other to the front, to the side. The instructor paced up and down the line, counting, coaching.

But the students wore blue jeans and sweat shirts, not leotards and tutus. And the moves they concentrated on were not delicate dance steps.

"If that doesn't break somebody's knees, come and see me," Mike Todhunter told one of his students as she delivered a kick to a punching bag.

TODHUNTER WAS teaching high school students and housewives how to defend themselves.

"The most important thing in self-defense for a woman is that they incapacitate the attacker," he said, but probably the hardest thing to remember is not to panic when you are assaulted, but to relax yourself, relax the assailant — then strike.

"If a guy comes up and grabs you and says 'Hey, you're coming with me,' you say 'Hey, relax, you're good looking,' and then — brumph — eyes," he said, jabbing at the air. "And then you run."

Todhunter is an instructor at the Olympic Karate School in Hoffman Estates. Twice each week he offers a free course in self-defense for women.

The instruction ranges from simple lessons on "how to break an arm or a leg" to more advanced moves.

"Now we're going to do an eye and groin technique," Todhunter said, directing his students to take the proper stance, knees relaxed, elbows tucked to their sides.

"Now you only do this in case of extreme emergency," he said, "and don't do it immediately — you have to relax the attacker first."

HE TOLD THEM how to put power behind their punches, when to turn the wrist, and how not to give signals before smashing in someone's face.

"If you have fingernails it's even better," he said as the woman flailed the air, practicing.

"This can also be delivered to the groin," he said, showing how to turn the arm under for another move.

The women lined up in front of the punching bag, stepping up to practice the blows as Todhunted chanted "eye, groin, eye, groin."

JULIE NICKLAS of Lake Park had seen a movie on self-defense in her high school health class, but never had a chance to practice what was shown. When her health teacher announced Todhunter's free Tuesday and Thursday evening classes "It sounded interesting, so I came."

Nicklas and a classmate, Sharon Ihnat, said a woman need not be in top physical shape to defend herself, but both doubted if their mothers could deliver a good kick.

Ihnat wondered how much of the training would stick with her. "If somebody grabbed me, I'd probably panic," she said.

But Aimee Nyquist, also of Lake Park, thought she would remember at least one move: "The eyes are the easiest."

A HOFFMAN ESTATES housewife, who was sent to the class by her husband, said she has become more confident in her ability to protect herself.

Rachel Salinas, of 134 Maricopa Ln., goes to the classes with her sister-in-law, Delores Salinas, 180 W. Aldridge Rd., Palatine.

"This really gives us a good workout," Rachel said.

"Been practicing, I see. You couldn't do that last week," Todhunter said as Rachel delivered a kick to the bag.

"With my children," she replied. "They practice on me. My 2-year-old is better than me."

"YOU'RE DOING fine," her teacher said.

"He's doing better."

Fire does $8,000 damage to handicapped kids' camp

A fire of undetermined origin resulted in an estimated $8,000 damage to a building at a Bartlett camp used by about 200 handicapped children from Northwest suburban schools.

No one was injured in the blaze Thursday night at Sunrise Lake Camp, Ill. Rte. 59 south of West Bartlett Road. The camp is owned by the Northwest Suburban Special Education Organization, a cooperative of 10 area school districts.

Jim Koinis, camp director, Friday said arson is suspected because it appeared someone may have started the fire from outside the building. He said there are no suspects. Bartlett Fire Chief Elmer Hecht, however, said the cause is unknown.

THE FIRE IN the camp's craft shop was discovered by a passing motorist about 7:45 p.m. Thursday, Hecht said. He said an automatic dialing device linked to the fire department was not working.

Hecht estimated the damage at $8,000, but Koinis said he believes it is more. Koinis said the fire burned through the floor and through two interior walls and also destroyed all the furniture.

The craft shop at Sunrise Lake is used by children each week for outdoor education and arts and crafts lessons, Koinis said. The children are bused to the camp on a daily basis from special education classes.

Bardwell, Dist. 59 at odds now its heyday and Bardwell was campaigning for nongraded classrooms and individually guided education.

REGARDLESS OF the merit of these ideas, the educational pendulum nationwide has swung to back-to-basics conservatism, leaving Bardwell, whose beliefs are unchanged, suddenly out of step with the times.

Striving for the personal touch in education, Bardwell is a staunch advocate of the small school and is arguing to keep all 21 of the district's schools open despite large enrollment declines.

While admitting this philosophy again puts him at loggerheads with his own board and virtually every other district in the area, Bardwell insists schools of 150 to 250 students are better educationally and economically than larger schools.

Teachers having more control in smaller schools are apt to be more productive and creative, he said. Empty classrooms can be used for teaching learning activities to the individual, developing student interest in crafts and opening up to community groups that have something to share with children, he said.

KEEPING ALL schools open will cost a little more in terms of heat, light and custodial services, but in terms of the actual learning experiences of children, it can be considered economical, Bardwell said.

The difficulty in selling this philosophy comes because "Henry Ford and not John Dewey has had the biggest influence on education in this century," he said.

Bardwell said his philosophical differences with the board have reduced his job to presenting points of view that receive little support and carrying out policies that he does not support.

"I'm best at problem solving and I'm not doing that anymore," he said.

Crews fix Campbell Street water main

Village work crews Friday night spent five hours patching up a broken water main under 200 block of Campbell Steet in Arlington Heights.

This week's cold temperatures were blamed for the break.

Two homes in the 300 block of Campbell Street and an apartment building at 1 N. Chestnut Ave. were without water between 6 and 11 p.m., a workman said. The break also caused flooding along parts of Campbell Street.

Crewmen said the break was the sixth in the village since early November.

Bulgarian jet crashes; 56 dead

A chartered Bulgarian jetliner carrying Moslem pilgrims home from Mecca crashed while attempting to make an emergency landing in northeastern Libya Friday, killing more than 50 persons, reports said. Baghdad Radio said at least 56 of the 159 passengers aboard the aircraft were killed. All were believed to be Libyans. Arab news agencies said the crash occured in northeastern Libya but reports of the precise location conflicted. The crash occurred at the end of the peak season of the annual Moslem pilgrimage, known as the Hajj. Some 1.6 million Moslems from all over the world made the pilgrimage to Mecca this year.

Smith opens talks with blacks

Prime Minister Ian Smith Friday opened talks with two black nationalist groups on his proposal for majority rule with universal adult suffrage, but the strongest black group boycotted the meeting. Also missing were representatives of the black guerrillas who have been fighting Smith's white government for five years. After the 75-minute meeting, a govrnment spokesman read a joint statement saying the participants discussed "ways of proceeding as quickly as possible to have a peaceful constitutional settlement. "The meeting was frank and cordial and a number of constructive proposals were made." Meeting with Smith to discuss a constitutional settlement outside the framework of the near-defunct Anglo-American peace plan were representatives from the African National Council and the tribal-oriented Zimbabwe United Peoples' Organization.

Egypt, Israel give-and-take told

Egypt will present a blueprint for an over-all Middle East settlement and Israel is prepared to make a major concession at pre-Geneva peace talks in mid-December, state-controlled Egyptian newspapers reported in Saturday editions. The reports said President Anwar Sadat had asked acting Foreign Minister Butros Ghali to draw up a plan calling for gradual Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab lands, creation of a Palestinian state on the West Bank of Jordan and for policing of the final accord by the two superpowers of the United Nations. Israel has rejected creaton of a Palestinian state. The Egyptian weekly Akhbar El-Yom said in its Saturday edition that Israel has prepared to withdraw completely from the Sinai peninsula within one year of an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty and make Saudi Arabia the custodian of Islamic shrines in Jerusalem.

British fire death toll up to 44

Two babies, an 8-year-old girl and two women died in fires Friday despite rescue efforts by striking firefighters who abandoned their picket signs to help troops attempting to reach the victims. The latest casualties raised the fire death toll to 44 since 35,000 British firefighters walked off the job 19 days ago to press for a 30 per cent pay increase and shorter hours. Striking firefighters pitched in to help troops trying to reach two babies trapped in a hotel fire near Southend, 40 miles east of London, but the rescuers were overcome by dense smoke and were unable to reach the victims. Strikers also joined troops trying to save a woman trapped in a top-floor apartment north of London, but the roof collapsed before she could be reached.

Mine talks go on; 2 walkouts occur

Union officials and coal operators held more than five hours of face-to-face negotiations Friday in an effort to avert a nationwide strike Tuesday. But mine workers president Arnold Miller was absent and "early bird" walkouts occurred in two states. "A lot of concepts are being discussed," said chief federal mediator Wayne Horvitz. "We've got them both working," Horvitz told reporters as he and other mediators left the session. "We're scheduled to bring them back face-to-face tomorrow morning." It was the first time in a week the two sides got together. Harrison Combs, the union's general counsel, was asked as he left the negotiations if there was any progress during the day. He replied: "No comment. That's the best way out of it."

Floods hit west Washington state

Western Washington rivers raged toward flood crests Friday, triggering mudslides that blocked highways, trapped trains, washed out bridges, forced hundreds of evacuations and killed a woman when her house was shoved down a hill. Coming on the heels of a record drought, torrential warm rains, with 24-hour measurements up to eight inches in some mountain areas, melted snow and sent torrents of water racing out of the Cascade Mountains to the lowlands along Puget Sound and the coast. Most of the residents forced to leave their homes were in the Longview-Kelso area of Cowlitz County in southwest Washington where flooding from many creeks and runoff from extremely heavy rains proved too much for the communities' storm sewer systems. A spokesman for the Cowlitz County emergency services department said several hundred families were forced to leave their homes and move in with relatives or friends.

Syphilis cases show 15% decline

Syphilis cases across the nation declined by 15 per cent during the frst nine months of this year, the national Center for Disease Control said Friday. For the month of September, the health agency said, syphilis cases dropped to 1,754, or 12 per cent less that the 2,007 reported during a similar period last year. During the first nine months of the year, 15,279 cases were recorded, as opposed to 17,955 cases in a like period of 1976. California led the nation with 2,752 cases during that period. Of the total, 1,006 of the cases occurred Los Angeles and 646 in San Francisco. New York state was second with 1,530 cases, 1,319 of them in New York City. Texas was third with 1,562 cases, and Florida was fourth with 1,400.

Elephant still roaming Florida

Colonel, an escaped four-ton circus elephant, eluded his would-be captors for the fourth consecutive day in a south Florida wilderness Friday, and his handler said it might take weeks to catch the huge beast. "Colonel is in his territory now, and we're out of ours. That's what makes it so tough," Frank Murray said. "He's got everything he needs: warm weather, water, grass, citrus. This could go on for weeks." The 14-year-old Indian elephant walked away from his handlers last Tuesday when a circus wagon broke down. He headed into a 65,000-acre, subtropical ranch and game preserve owned by the Lykes Brothers meat packing company and has been seen only once since then.

Three Steps to Early Disease Detection

1. An analysis of your lifestyle and health history will help in determining the probability of you contacting disease. This information also will be helpful in identifying changes in your normal activity which have proven to add to general good health and increase life expectancy.

2. Diagnostic tests including blood analysis, chest x-rays, an electrocardiogram, and urinalysis will help determine the presence or absence of disease. If further testing is indicated, it will be prescribed by the physician.

3. After a complete and comprehensive physical examination by a member of the hospital's Medical Staff, you will receive an interpretation of all results and suggestions for a personalized health program.

These steps are all part of the Early Disease Detection Program of Holy Family and the hospital's Medical Staff practicing in your community.

Call us Monday through Friday, at 297-1800, extension 1157, to obtain more information on how you can take these three steps to Early Disease Detection.

A-Texas-like flu found in 7 states, Puerto Rico

ATLANTA (UPI) — Flu cases apparently triggered by the new A-Texas virus strain were reported in seven states and Puerto Rico Friday by the national Center for Disease Control.

"Influenza activity seems to be widely disseminated across the country," Dr. Philip Graitcer, a flu surveillance officer with the CDC said. He said cases were occurring in such widely separated states as Oregon and New York.

Graitcer said influenza watchers at the CDC still do not know the kind of flu that will be around this winter or its possible extent.

Nearly all the flu viruses that have been identified so far, however, have been the A-Texas or A-Texas-like strain.

The virus that causes the A-Texas variety of influenza is similar to the A-Victoria strain that touched off an epidemic in this country two years ago and caused widespread illness once again last winter.

THERE HAVE BEEN some reports of A-Victoria flu in Florida and the Caribbean island of Jamaica. For this reason, CDC officials were reluctant to make predictions on which type of influenza eventually will predominate.

Graitcer said the symptoms of the A-Texas infection and its degree of severity are similar to those of A-Victoria.

States reporting sporadic cases of influenza were Hawaii, New Jersey, New York, Wisconsin, Colorado and Oregon. Previous reports of flu activity came from Florida and Puerto Rico.

Federal health officials hope to determine soon whether the currently recommended flu vaccine is effective against the A-Texas virus. The vaccine, which protects specifically against the A-Victoria and B-Hong Kong strains, has recommended last spring for the high risk groups persons 65 or older and those with chronic ailments.

Community services council to meet

The Northwest Suburban Council for Community Services will meet Thursday at Harper College, Building A, faculty dining area, Room 242-B

Lunch will be served at 11:30 a.m.; a business meeting will follow. There will be a slide cassette presentation by the Jewish Children's Bureau on "Pregnant Teen-agers."

Representatives of human service agencies and interested citizens are invited to attend. The goal of the council's monthly meetings is to enhance awareness of services, to strengthen existing services and to support programs that are initiated to meet the needs of the Northwest area.

Six Christmas concerts planned

Six Christmas concerts sponsored by four Northwest suburban churches and a North Shore congregation are planned for December.

Immanuel Lutheran Church, 200 N. Plum Grove Rd., Palatine, will sponsor a concert at 4:30 p.m. Sunday. The senior choir of Immanuel Lutheran will join the adult choir of St. Peter Lutheran Church, Schaumburg, to present a program of Advent and Christmas music.

Musical instruments, including brass, hand bells and an organ, will accompany some of the anthems.

Guest conductor will be Werner Grams, organist and composer for Jehovah Lutheran Church, Chicago. A free will offering will be taken.

The Winnetka Bible Church, 555 Birch St., Winnetka, will sponsor a performance of Handel's Messiah at 7 p.m. Sunday.

The performance will feature soloists, a 65-voice choir and a 22-piece orchestra, with a string quartet.

The Arlington Heights Evangelical Free Church, 1331 N. Belmont Ave., Arlington Heights, will sponsor concerts at 8 p.m. Dec. 9 and 5 and 7:30 p.m. Dec. 11 at the church.

The concert, "Moods of Christmas," will feature Christmas music by Robert Shaw and Robert Russell Bennett, performed by choral ensembles, an 80-voice concert choir and a 45-piece orchestra conducted by Frank Eikenberry, music director for the church.

The 1st Baptist Church of Hoffman Estates, 300 Illinois Blvd., will present a Christmas cantata entitled, "Down From His Glory," by John W. Peterson, at 6 p.m. Dec. 11.

Boyd Robertson, minister of music at the church, will lead a 30-voice choir in the cantata. The event is open to the public, and a free will offering will be taken.

Return to church delayed

The 1st Baptist Church of Arlington Heights has delayed its return to its repaired buiding one week to Dec. 11.

The church's building, 1211 W. Campbell St., had been damaged by a boiler explosion earlier this year. Since the blast, the congregation has met in the Arlington Heights Village Hall.

The church will reoccupy the building for its regular Sunday school at 9:45 a.m., worship service at 10:50 a.m. and evening service at 6:30 p.m. Dec. 11.

Crusade kicks off new drive

David E. Anderson

World of religion

Bill Bright and the Campus Crusade for Christ, the people who flooded America with the "I Found It" bumper stickers, have announced the most ambitious evangelism campaign ever — a $1 billion plan to bring the message of Christ to the world by 1982.

"It is a goal that I have held dear for more than 30 years — to fulfill the Great Commission," Bright said in announcing the campaign.

The Great Commission is a term used by evangelicals to refer to Jesus' words in the gospel of Matthew 28:19-20 when he tells his disciples to "go therefore and make disciples of all nations . . ."

BRIGHT HAS BROUGHT together a group of wealthy and influential evangelicals to put the fundraising campaign together, including movie stars Roy Rogers and Dale Evans, Holiday Inns co-founder Wllace E. Johnson and Dallas oilman Nelson Bunker Hunt.

The program aims at raising $100 million by the end of 1978. Campaign officials say about $30 million has already been pledged.

In essence, Bright wants to extend the "Here's Life, America" ministry of the Campus Crusade from a U.S. emphasis to a global effort.

According to Crusade officials, the "Here's Life, America" campaign, a media saturation effort which targeted 253 U.S. cities, worked through 15,000 congregations of all denominations and mobilzed some 300,000 Christian volunteers to spread Bright's version of Jesus' message.

Television and film will be a key ingredient in the campaign, particularly in reaching foreign cities. In rural areas, the plan calls for placing expensive radios and television sets in two million villages where broadcasting facilities are available and use of "circuit-riding" portable theaters built into vans in other areas.

"It is not our desire to compete with any other religious group for money projects," Johnson said. "Our goal is that this project will stimulate and give vitality to other Christian movements which share our goals to communicate Christ to the world.

Charity offers wish list

Catholic Charities of Chicago is offering a "Christmas Wish List" which identifies current needs of service programs and inner city parishes.

The booklet, published yearly, is available by writing the Catholic Charities' Public Relations Office, 126 N. Des Plaines St., Chicago, Ill. 60606, or by calling 236-5172 ext. 21 or 22.

Food has high priority among the needs listed, followed by clothing, toys for children and small gifts for the elderly.

Some of the receiving sites listed in the booklet will accept such used items as clothing and furniture if they are in good condition. Other locations are available for parties and entertainment for children and senior citizens or accept volunteer help.

Other wishes include playground equipment, tables and folding chairs, office equipment, a school bus, a minibus or van and a station wagon.

Among the agencies listed in the booklet is Maryville Academy, Des Plaines.

Hanukkah starts Sunday evening

Hanukkah, the Jewish Festival of Lights, begins at sundown Sunday and will last for the next eight days. The holiday commemorates the recapture of the Temple in Palestine from Syrians 2,142 years ago.

Jews celebrate the holiday with the traditional kindling of the eight-branched menorah each night, playing the dreidl (top) game, eating latkes (potato pancakes) and exchanging gifts.

Legend says when the Jews rededicated the Temple they found only enough oil to keep their eternal light burning for one day. But miraculously, the oil lasted 8 days.

Today Jews light the candles each night because of this miracle.

'Bossism' tempts Adlai

The efforts by Democratic U.S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson to rearrange his party's state slate are a clear sign that Illinois Democrats have not yet master ed the theory and practice of an open political process.

In fact, Stevenson's back-room maneuverings, which involve trying to displace Metropolitan Sanitary District commissioners Richard Troy and Jerome Cosentino from their candidacies for attorney general and secretary of state, have the flavor of the same kind of "boss politics" that have characterized past party workings.

Stevenson and other party leaders have good reason to be unhappy with the party's slate, which was arrived at after an open display of political clout by Troy's father-in-law, County Commr. Matthew Bieszczat, and by labor leaders who favor Cosentino.

Because of those power plays, the party finds itself with a slate which lacks the traditional balance between Cook County and Downstate and which has two candidates who are associated with the scandal-tainted MSD.

Stevenson is probably right when he concludes that Troy and Cosentino do not make the strongest possible candidates for the posts they seek. The way to rectify that, however, is not through another slatemaking meeting. It is through the primary election process.

If Stevenson or other Democrats believe they can offer Democratic voters candidates superior to those slated by the party's central committee, they should support those candidates in the primary. Such contests are already shaping up in the Republican Party for state treasurer and state comptroller.

Many political leaders have made the point that this year's Democratic slatemaking was the first "unbossed" slating session following the death of Richard J. Daley. Many have also said Daley would have put together a better slate than the slatemakers came up with.

What these critics fail to understand is that the real test of the "unbossed" nature of the post-Daley Democratic Party will be whether open processes extend into the primary election. Democratic voters, not the leaders, should have the final choice on the state ticket.

That is a lesson Stevenson should learn before he goes any further in his efforts to dump some candidates from the party's slate.

County hospital staff learns a lesson

Cook County Hospital managed to break ground for a new $5 million addition to its outpatient clinic this week. But first hospital officials had to shed a few tears in a bizzare confrontation with the Cook County board.

Dr. James Haughton, executive director of the health and hospitals governing commission, got up at a county board meeting to invite the county commissioners to the groundbreaking ceremony. But no sooner were the words out of his mouth than the questions started flying about how the hospital presumed to build an addition without the county board's approval.

Haughton said that County Board President George W. Dunne's approval of the federal grant application for the $5 million was taken as authorization for the whole building project.

Not so, said Dunne and several county board members who have been critical in the past of the hospital administration.

The tension was broken when Charles Davis, chairman of the governing commission, promised to take whatever procedural steps are needed to get formal approval of the building.

The important point is that this needed addition to the outpatient clinic at county hospital will be built. And if hospital officials also learned a small lesson in legal protocol, so much the better.

McClellan had integrity when judged by 'old code'

Paul Greenberg

John L. McClellan's standards were not everyone's. Indeed, toward the end of his long tenure in the Senate, they were becoming unrepresentative of a changing Arkansas, so that the pillars of his last great dramatic victory in 1972 turned out to be Orval Faubus and Jim Johnson, two politicoes whose day had passed long ago.

And yet judged by the code that had shaped him and the only one he gave a hoot about, the old code by which a man's word was his bond and conflict-of-interest only a newfangled technicality used by troublemakers to taunt their betters, John L. McClellan was a man of rare integrity. He was, in the root sense of that word, all of a piece.

From the time he ran a losing race against Hattie Caraway (and Franklin Roosevelt) for the United States Senate in the Depression-tinged year of 1938, John L. was a champion of the top dog. He had no pangs about it, having been a devout believer in the trickle-down theory long before it was called that in popular parlance. True, he had first run for Congress as a New Deal Democrat on the slogan: "SECURITY: For the Home! For Livelihood! For Old Age!" But his heart was not in it. The eldest son of a farm family in Grant County — a county renowned for its individualism, poverty, and isolation — he was loyal to the gods of things as they are and should always be.

BUT IF John McClellan believed in the trickle-down theory, he sent a lot of it trickling down. Senator McClellan could always be counted on to bring home the bacon, or rather the pork. He was responsible for almost as much patronage and as many public works as he claimed, which was a prodigious amount even for a chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

The greatest monument to Ole Jawn, in terms of the time it took, the money it cost, and the change it made, is the Arkansas River Navigation Project. It took decades of untiring political spadework and cost some $1.2 billion on its completion as the largest project in the history of the Army Corps of Engineers. It continues to prove its worth, supporting the Arkansas economy the way the Nile feeds Egypt. Only now without the periodic flooding.

It was to a remarkable extent the dream and work of only one political leader, but it will continue to benefit all of Arkansas and many places beyond long after he is gone. It is enough to give pause to anyone tempted to turn up his nose at pork. Surely the quality of life also includes not getting starved out, or flooded out, and having work. In that sense, Ole Jawn championed the quality of life in Arkansas, no matter what the environmentalists said.

SENATOR MCCLELLAN often explained that he broke with Franklin Roosevelt, first of a long line of presidents to be dissatisfied with his old-fashioned ways, over FDR's court-packing scheme. But one suspects that his principled stand was inspired not so much by the love of an independent judiciary as respect for the authority of tradition. Years later, Senator McClellan would sign the Southern Manifesto and join in just about every other seggish attack on the Supreme Court of the United States when the law dared oppose tradition. John McClellan's sympathies were strong and deeply rooted, if not broad.

And yet his iron determination could serve the Republic well, even masterfully, on occasion. Arkansas can take great pride in having had both its senators stand up to Joe McCarthy when it appeared that the rest of the Senate and maybe the country was quaking in its oxfords.

J. William Fulbright did it in his own dramatic way by casting a lone vote at a crucial time. John L. McClellan did it by mastering the mechanics of partisan politics and the appropriations process (two of his favorite weapons) and cutting off Joe's water. At one time the senior senator from Arkansas walked out on the bully and took with him all the other Democrats on the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations. In John McClellan, Joe McCarthy had run across an investigator just as tough and with a good deal more savvy.

OLE JAWN, TOO, might have gone too far on occasion. A young aide on the staff of the McClellan Committee — Bobby Kennedy — would take John McClellan as one of his patron saints in politics. They might not have had much in common where politics was concerned, but both had the same driving quality. Ruthlessness, they called it in Bobby Kennedy.

John L. could be one of the toughest interrogators in the business, whether grilling a racketeer, lashing out on the stump, or just answering a phone call. I know; I had the privilege of being on the other end of the line a few years back. He never let down his guard. Maybe it was a holdover from those hardscrabble times in Grant County. He had acquired the Populist fire without the usual Populist concerns.

It wasn't just combativeness in Ole Jawn's case. It was strength. He bore with remarkable stoicism a long succession of personal sorrows that might have crushed another. His mother died before her time. He lost all three of his sons during his lifetime: One in the Second World War, the other two in accidents.

And yet John McClellan held up, as he always had. He was that kind of man. He never gave up, whether pushing a river project for more than two decades or managing an improbably comeback in the last two weeks of his last campaign for re-election. Whether or not one agreed with his politics, one always wished John L. McClellan were on one's side. There can be no greater compliment to a political fighter than that.

Of course he would die, blessedly, in his sleep. Not even the Angel of Death would have dared creep up on John L. McClellan in broad daylight.

Readers' abortion debate continues

We were not called by The Daily Herald in the random survey but we wish to briefly express our views on the proposed Elk Grove abortion clinic.

We disapprove of this or any other abortion clinic in Elk Grove Village. We are a residential community with a local hospital and are within 15 minutes of another hospital which does allow resident physicians to perform abortions.

George Long, owner of the building, is quoted as saying, "A lot of people don't know what an abortion is anyway." Who is he fooling? Abortion is the killing of a live human being. The law of the land allows this. But does that make abortion morally right?

Mr. Long has had a partially vacant medical building which has deteriorated in appearance over the last few years. It appears as if he has been unable to maintain full occupancy and now wishes to sell out to a Florida operation wanting to set up an abortion clinic in our family-oriented community. Has this viewpoint been considered?

We view this as a purely profit-making venture on the part of Mr. Long and the Florida group. This is providing no service to our community as hospital abortions are available to those whose choice is to abort.

It is disgusting to us to think that the zoning laws of our village may be changed to allow this type of "business" to enter our community in order to free itself of a lawsuit. Is an abortion clinic the business Elk Grove Village wants to stand for?

Dave and Mary Paliganoff
Elk Grove Village

TO MRS. CAROL HIGHT:

I read your letter Nov. 10. It was brief and to the point, but I disagree.

So you don't like paying to support unwanted children? I have news for you. You will support unwanteds from now till doomsday as long as women have babies to enhance their ADC payments.

Most women getting abortions are those who got pregnant by mistake. But let's not argue that point.

Your alternative to unwanted children is murder. Pick up a weekend copy of any major city paper and turn to the classifieds. There are dozens of ads, one on top of another, for abortion clinics. As you look at the sight, ask yourself if this is what you really want for our society. Then ask yourself where society will go from here.

You may want to ask yourself one more question. How did the chain of events lead up to abortions?

Are we going to continue to allow young people to be so disrespectful to each others' bodies with obscene magazines, movies and novels that drive them into motel rooms?

When our daughters are 14, are we going to put them on pills? Are we going to let teachers in some schools give a highly educational and logical speech on the biology of sex without teaching them about sex as a moral responsibility to each other, as a sound base for marriage, in addition to love, communication and a lot of hard work?

Abortion is merely the grand finale of high living — two people who had their fun and didn't give any thought to the life they may produce. If we condone abortion, we are merely closing our eyes to a bigger problem and pretending that the problem does not exist.

Where will we go from here? Perhaps we should get rid of the retarded, handicapped and old.

'Park board like the mad-hatter'

Why are Arlington Heights residents distressed with their park board? The board has been hurrying-scurrying like a mad-hatter who's late for the very important date with the big-spenders.

First, the park board flatly refused to cut even $1 from its $600,000 clubhouse, despite citizen requests. As citizens pointed out, the board did have $300,000 in the referendum budget for a clubhouse. Why couldn't the board live up to its agreement with the voters? The board assumes it has the legal right to spend more by incurring construction loans. Is this the legal intent of the state statutes? Or is it a loophole not intended? Whatever it is, it has given the park board the opportunity to thumb its nose at citizens requesting moderation in spending. If the board does it this time, will this same tactic occur again? With the Prairie Farm?

If citizens weren't bothered enough by the board's vote to go ahead with the clubhouse, they were amazed to realize that the very same motion accepted bids. Why such haste? By forcing the acceptance of bids, the board further defied taxpayers' efforts to continue their protest. After all, now the board is committed; if it's forced to reconsider, it will cost the taxpayers a penalty. This is Catch 22!

If citizens still weren't troubled enough, they have now discovered that in the park board's rush to get its clubhouse, it has overlooked procuring a building permit. That's right, the park board dashed ahead with its vote before it obtained essential rezoning and a building permit.

If any citizens are still unconcerned about the park board, the bustle isn't over yet. In 1975 the board discovered the museum tax levy. Naturally, to levy such a tax, a museum is essential. Without delay, the board scrambled up the Prairie Farm idea, which might have merit. But which came first, the power to levy a tax or a Prairie Farm? Why such impetuosity?

Right now the board is trying to spend more of our dollars to hire a PR person to change its image. The board has a very clear image — the hurrying-scurrying mad-hatter. If it wants to improve, it will have to become responsive by seeking citizens' recommendations. It needs to communicate with the citizens and to listen to what citizens are saying.

'Shovel walks'

I am a fifth grade student at Fairview School. I have a complaint. It's very hard to walk on the sidewalks. I slipped and fell and have seen other kids fall too.

People don't want us to walk on their grass and if we walk in the street, like some kids do, we could get hit by a car or bus.

I think people should shovel the sidewalks. I would like it if people were not so lazy and would shovel their sidewalks. Even the school doesn't shovel their sidewalk.

Taubman's Lance stories deserving of a Pulitzer

Watch on Washington

If Phil Taubman had been working for the Washington Post, the New York Times, or any other major newspaper, he would be a prime candidate for a Pulitzer Prize for his work in breaking the Bert Lance story.

There is no doubt the 29-year-old reporter's Time magazine story was the opening volley in the exploration of the financial affairs of President Carter's director of the Office of Management and Budget.

Taubman's story in the May 23 issue pointing up the financial squeeze that Lance was in on his agreement to sell his stock in the National Bank of Georgia, was more important than any story that Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein did for the Washington Post on the Watergate affair.

THAT STORY ON THE SHARP drop in the value of the stock of the National Bank of Georgia caught the attention of Stanley Sporkin, chief of enforcement at the Securities and Exchange commission, and the staff members on the Senate Government Affairs Committee, as well as the Senate and House Banking Committees.

The Taubman story was enough to raise the serious question of whether Bert Lance would be wiped out if forced to sell his National Bank of Georgia stock within the time agreed to with the Senate Government Affairs Committee.

It also punched the first big holes in the image of Bert Lance as the conservative voice in the Carter White House and a force for sound fiscal policies and a balanced budget.

FROM THAT POINT Bert Lance was on a downhill slide, with other publications becoming first skeptical of Lance and then agressive in pulling out the various pieces of the scandal.

Taubman, a Stanford University graduate, had worked for Time for three years in Boston, and for more than two years had been a writer (mostly sports) in the New York office. There he had agitated for an assignment to the Washington bureau.

Assigned to the Washington bureau early in 1976, Taubman worked on stories os labor and economics. One story dealing with the operations of the Office of Management and Budget resulted in the young writer spending a full day with Lance, watching him work. While impressed with the confident manner in which Lance handled himself, Taubman also noticed more than a touch of the wheeler-dealer in the former Georgia banker.

The White House had announced that Lance had $650,000 in debts in its press release and Taubman put that together wih the falling value of stock in the National Bank of Georgia and smelled potential trouble.

IN A MEMORANDUM TO TIME Washington Bureau Chief Hugh Sidey in late March, Taubman spelled out his concerns about Lance's debts and also the potential for conflicts of interest.

After Sidey gave him the okay to dig into Lance's finances, one of his first stops was at the Senate Government Affairs Committee where Taubman was stunned to learn that Lance's debts reported to that committee were $5.3 million instead of the $650,000 in the White House press release.

On a trip to Georgia, Taubmar's fears for Lance's fiscal solvency were confirmed in conversations with friends and acquaintances of Lance in various Georgia banks.

Lance's banker friends said they "couldn't understand how old Bert got his OMB post and took consolation in the fact they did not have to solve Lance's financial problems in the face of the falling value of the stock of National Bank of Georgia.

AFTER THE STORY RAN, there was an abrupt lack of interest in a second story or in further agressive probling into the financial affairs of the second most powerful man in Washington.

Although Taubman had several exclusive stories in later months, his other stories on the Lance affair followed the routine. The case against Lance was developed by other reporters as well as by the investigations of a dozen government agencies.

Taubman, largely unheralded and unsung, resigned from his job with Time in November. He was thoroughly disgusted with the anonymity and the corporate editorial decisions that prevented him from following through with the kind of in-depth reporting that could have kept him ahead of the pack.

He has taken a job with Esquire magazine, where he will write sports. Although he will receive a modest pay increase, it was not the money that moved him.

"I WAS DISAPPOINTED with some of the decisions, and I have had enough of the anonymity," Taubman said.

While there is no precedent for a Pulitzer award for a magazine article, the Pulitzer committee could give consideration to one of those "Special Awards" for Phil Taubman or Time magazine.

The old Christmas rush: if you can't beat it, relax

Dorothy Meyer

AND FURTHERMORE (to continue last week's column about the planning of time for the working woman during the holiday season) I think it was a dirty trick for that certain television network to schedule "Casablanca" this week just as I was planning to get started.

They ought to know that nobody — thisbody, anyway — can resist watching "Casablanca" and what's wrong with showing it in February? Then I would have more time to fret about Paul Henreid because he never kissed Ingrid except on the cheek and no wonder she wanted to stay with Bogie.

But we must get back to getting ready for Christmas, mustn't we:

GETTING READY for Christmas is like scheduling a seven-course dinner party of 12 — no matter how well you plan, there's too much to do at the last minute.

Like the housecleaning, for instance. Whether you're preparing for a dinner party in July or trying to beat the Christmas rush by mid-December, it's silly to clean too soon because it's only going to get messed up again.

There is, specifically, the bathroom.

You can clean the living room and declare it off limits for three days in advance of the event, and you can go to drive-ins for a week to avoid un-neatening your hyper-neat kitchen. You even can drug your family into a coma the night before to ensure the status quo.

BUT THERE'S no way you can pre-clean a bathroom.

At the last minute you have to hang up fresh towels, wipe whiskers out of the sink and try to fluff up the shag carpeting so the damp footprints of the last one out of the shower won't show.

Secondly, be it Christmas or a dinner party, you can't mail the cards or fix the salad too far in advance.

As I pointed out a few years ago, if you mail early some of your friends will have been converted to Judaism, divorced, convicted of embezzling or moved since you last heard from them.

WITH THE salad, you'll belatedly discover that, since they last raved about it, your guests have developed gallstones and allergies or been married to people who never eat salads.

Thirdly, you can't win so relax and enjoy the occasion.

Why get uptight about having a bathroom that looks like it's never been used?

Who says everybody will get rickets if you skip the salad for a change?

AND REMEMBER — while you're waiting to hear from friends on your Christmas card list so you'll know who's been divorced or converted since last year, they're probably waiting to hear if you've moved or been convicted for embezzling.

Finally, let's hope some network doesn't decide to run "African Queen" between now and Christmas.

The custom home—utopia for many HOMEBUILDING CONTINUES to flourish in the Northwest suburbs, even during the winter months; and gaining in popularity is the custom house. Builders say an increasing number of olders families are drawn to such homes, and because of soaring values of properties they already own, are not deterred by price tags exceeding $100,000 in order to get what they want.

by DAVE IBATA

After decades of dominance by the mass-producued tract home, the custom-built house is enjoying a revival in the Northwest suburbs.

Leading the movement are older families, higher up on the economic ladder and dissatisfied with the years spent and the thousands of dollars invested in tract houses, builders say.

Such families are living in their second or third tract home by the time they start pining for the spacious affluence of a tailor-made house.

And thanks to soaring values of existing homes, they find they have sufficient equity to make the jump into the $100,000-price range typical of custom designs, builders say.

'Most people want a U-shaped kitchen with a rather large breakfast eating area. The trend seems to be toward large family rooms and not quite so large living rooms as in the past.'

FOR MOST families, the move to a custom-built house represents the final step in home ownership. As such, it is also the most expensive. Area builders quoted prices ranging from $100,000 to $200,000 for the average custom-built home.

Prices can go "to infinity," one builder said, depending on the extravagances of a particular family.

John L. Domeier, chairman of the GreatAmerican Federal Savings and Loan Assn., Chicago, said, "The tract home undeniably gives you a lot of value for your money, but it's also true that you get the most individuality and flexibility of design in a house that's built exactly for you."

"You're not restricted to what a builder has to offer," Domeier said.

WILLIAM SIEDEMAN is owner of Siedeman and Sons Realty Development Inc. and its custom-building division, Andrea Building Corp. Siedeman is based in Crystal Lake, and is building in Streamwood and Lake, McHenry and northern Cook County.

"Business is very good," Siedeman said. "Every year we're increasing our custom business better than 25 per cent."

He said, "Basically, the people are seond and third homebuyers, and they have the equity to get into larger homes to suit their individual lifestyles."

Families have placed down payments of between $40,000 and $50,000 on $100,000 homes, Siedeman said — down payments that would have bought the entire custom house five years ago.

THE TYPICAL purchaser is an older family, with the husband and wife in their 30s or older, earning a combined income of more than $30,000 Siedeman said. Such families usually have two or three children, he said.

Contrary to the myth that many families go wild when planning a custom-built home, builders say unusual requests are rare.

Vern Gilbert, vice president of the custom-built home division of Lancer Corp., Schaumburg, said, "They (buyers) are pretty down-to-earth. They want a large home. They're at least second homebuyers, and sometimes third or fourth buyers."

After years of home ownership, such families know exactly what they want, builders say.

FIRST, CUSTOM homebuyers seek larger quarters: 2,000 to 3,500 square feet, four or five bedrooms, at least two baths, attached 2- to 2½-car garages, and larger, fully sodded lots, builders say.

Once families decide how large a house they want, they proceed to pack it with such creature comforts as fireplaces, central air conditioning, basements, wall-to-wall carpeting, ceramic-tiled baths, top-line appliances in kitchens, linoleum no-wax floors in kitchens and breakfast areas, paneled family rooms and quality wood trim builders say.

Gilbert said, "Most people want a U-shaped kitchen with a rather large breakfast eating area. The trend seems to be toward large family rooms and not quite so large living rooms as in the past.

"Full basements are quite popular, and the larger the garage, the better," he said. "And people do want large master bedroom suites."

ABOVE ALL, the custom home must be complete when delivered — no rough edges, such as unfinished family rooms or unsodded lots, Siedeman said.

"They played the game the first time, and now they want their homes finished," he said.

As for prices, Siedeman said, "You can buy the same home for $80,000 or $150,000, depending on land value. The biggest significant factor in costs today is land."

For example, he said, land prices in Lake and McHenry counties range from $16,000 to $30,000 per half-acre, while a 50-foot lot on the North Shore can cost up to $75,000.

A QUARTER-ACRE site in the Northwest suburbs typically costs between $20,000 and $30,000, Siedeman said.

Most custom building is under way either in closer-in suburbs, especially along the North Shore, or in such uncongested outlying areas as the Fox River Valley, Siedeman said.

Gilbert said his firm next year will begin building a 16-home subdivision in Inverness, to be called Inverway. Homes there will start at approximately $120,000, while the average house would sell for $150,000, he said.

Most families classified by builders as custom buyers choose from a standard line of house plans prepared in advance by the developer — thus raising the question whether they are buying a custom or a "customized" house. Gilbert said one out of every three custom homes his firm builds use schematics drafted for an individual family.

SIEDEMAN SAID, "Normally the custom homebuyer of a $100,000 unit wants some significant change, and normally we'll have new plans drawn up by our own architect or the family's architect."

Domeier said the prospective custom homebuyer should remember that not only will custom house cost more than a tract home, but building such a home means:

- A risk that the finished house may be so tailored to an individual family it may be difficult to find a buyer willing to pay the asking price, or willing to buy at all, if the time comes to sell.
- The buyer must deal with an architect and a contractor, which will be time consuming and involve additional fees.
- The custom home probably will take longer to build, because of planning, bid-taking and delays in obtaining tradesmen or in deliveries of materials. Be prepared to wait one or two months beyond a contractor's estimated completion date.
- Final cost may be higher than expected because of unforeseen problems, rising material and labor prices during the course of construction, underestimates by subcontractors, and changes and additions made while building.
- The completed house may not be exactly the product a family expected. Some persons have difficulty in visualizing a completed home from a blueprint.

Winter care for tree rose

A tree rose, as the name implies, is actually a small tree with a straight stem on top of which is a more or less bushy, flower-bearing crown.

Well-formed and carefully maintained tree roses are handsome features in any garden, and matched pairs are especially attractive.

Because of the time and effort required to produce tree roses, they are relatively expensive — about three times the cost of an ordinary rose.

If you are going to acquire a tree rose or if you already have one you should protect it as a valuable plant against breakage, insects, diseases and winter damage.

ROSES LIKE this quickly lose their form if they are not pruned. Main pruning should occur after flowering and only enough wood should be removed to maintain the plant's shape. It is also a good idea to cut away any sprouts that develop at the base of the tree. Sprouts like these use energy that otherwise would go to the flowering part of the tree.

If you live in a climate where winters are mild you can wrap your tree rose in burlap and work straw in between the branches. But if your winters are severe the best protection you can give your rose tree is to bury it as illustrated.

Before burying a rose tree wait until several heavy frosts have caused the leaves to fall and hardened the woody parts of the plant. Before the ground freezes dig a trench as outlined by the dashed line in the upper sketch. The trench should be on the side of the bottom graft. It should be about 12 iches deep and long and wide enough to accommodate the tree.

Next, carefully loosen the soil ball of the tree and bend the tree into the trench — as in the lower sketch. Carefully weight the tree down to hold it in

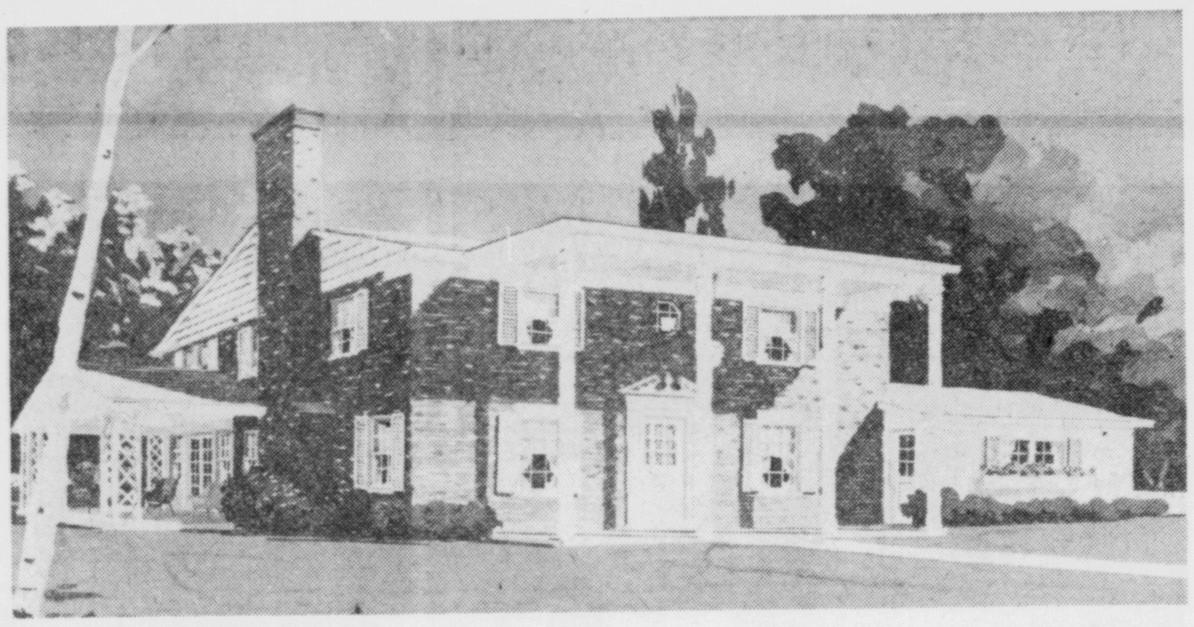
Square shape cuts building costs of colonial



The habitable plan of this home is almost an exact square. It does not give that appearance, however, because of the attached porches and garage. The square shape keeps construction costs to a minimum, as does the fact the ground floor perimeter of a two-story is about half the size of a one story of the same size.

Although the total square footage of both floors combined is more than 2,500 square feet, the building cost of this house will be less than the size would indicate. Cost per square foot on a second floor is much less than that of the one-story portion.

The strictly colonial style was used for this design because recent trends in the furniture market show it to be popular once again. This trend has not yet shown up generally in home design popularity, but how the furniture industry goes, so goes the construction industry and architects.

THE TWO-STORY columned front porch has always been the most dramatic of the Colonial design features for a facade. Here, it shelters an 8-by-28-foot porch and strictly conforms to the formal balance of the main section of the home.

Antique brick is used all around with its black and whites as well as reds which presents a pleasing and interesting exterior appearance.

Inside the front entrance is a vestibule, with guest coat closet, which precedes the main foyer itself. The 90-degree turned stairway goes to the second floor from here.

The living and dining rooms lie on opposite sides of the foyer and are large in size. Typical of all full two-story houses, all rooms are of good proportions.

ACROSS THE entire rear of the house (35 feet) a combination of open spaces are linked together into the kitchen, family room and solarium. The whole length has an unobstructed view.

The solarium is a dramatic touch as well as a plant lover's dream and an interesting spot to relax with nature. It is glazed on all four sides for both the view from inside and out so as to take full advantage of the sunlight.

Just outside the solarium is a large porch that we suggest might be screened for summer outdoor dining.

The service core at the rear of the garage contains the garage entrance and vestibule, the laundry clean-up lavatory and a garage storage closet. The entire unit lies just outside the kitchen entrance and close to the basement stair.

On the second floor are four large bedrooms, two full baths (the one with the shower stall is privately connected to the master bedroom) and excellent closet space.

Exterior materials used are: antique brick, clapboards, wood shutters, double-hung wood windows, wood columns and asphalt roof shingles.

place and fill soil over and around it. Minimum depth of soil covering the tree should be about six inches. For added protection spread straw or leaves over the top of the trench.

Be sure to mark the location of the buried rose tree with a conspicuous stake.

I am thinking of building a tennis court. Would you recommend a clay surface or a blacktop one?

Clay makes a fine resilient playing surface but blacktop, which is harder to play on, is much less expensive to maintain.

Is it true that you should spread fertilizer over areas you intend to mulch with fresh sawdust?

Yes. This is recommended because existing nitrogen is used in the process of decomposition of the sawdust.

Zaniest gifts for green thumbs

Mary B. Good

Potting shed

Here we go with our annual "gifts for gardeners" selections, a mini-compendium of the latest, zaniest, most improbable presents you might casually consider for your gardening friends and lovers of nature (not necessarily synonymous) for Christmas.

Believe it — the Johnny planter. It draws water from the toilet tank to water your plants: $9.98 from Harriet Carter gifts, Dept. 72, Plymouth Meeting, Pa. 19462.

Also from Harriet: A plant taxi. Move plants where you want them with a rolling three-wheel dolly; has raised rim to catch drips, 12-inch diameter $3.95; also "Language of Flowers," $5.98, a reproduction of an old English dictionary, handscribed by an adoring, long-gone 19th century husband; or extra-long gardening gloves to protect forearms from scratches, $2.95. Harriet takes Master Charge, BankAmericard, American Express.

A N ELECTRIC Carousel from Bookstone, Hard-to-Find Gifts. (5 Vose Farm Rd., Petersbourough, N.H. 03458) gives plants equal sunning while revolving. Hot Line: 603-924-7181 for same day service. Takes Master Charge.

"Do As I Say" rooter, $11.95. A solid wood handcut block with sculptured letters that spell "grow," holds six glass test tubes for rooting cuttings. Joan Cook Gifts, 3200 S.E. 14th Ave., Fort Lauderdale, Fla. 33316. 305-761-1600. Takes most credit cards.

A gardeniing apron with knee pads and six large pockets for tools, $17.98, has individually sewn fabric appliques of fruit and vegetables. Lillian Vernon, 510 S. Fulton Ave., Mount Vernon, N.Y. 10550. Takes Master Charge and BankAmericard.

A LESS EXPENSIVE but equally attractive apron is offered by Plants Alive Magazine reader service, 5509 First Ave., South, Seattle, Wash. 98108. For $8.95 you can order an apron that says: "Give a weed an inch and it will take a yard" emblazoned on the front.

Got $300 to blow on your favorite gardener? How about a maple potting bench with built in potting soil bin, waste bin, cabinet for chemicals and laminated top? Stratford House, P.O. Box 289, 277 Ferry Blvd., Stratford, Conn. 06497. Takes most cards.

Aerate your grass as you mow or water with lawn aerator sandals with thirteen 1½-inch spikes $9.99. Holiday Gifts, 4975 Miller Rd., Wheat Ridge, Colo. 80036. Master Charge, Bank-Americard.

BEGINNING beekeeping outfit $115, with a 2-pound package (6,000) bees) of ever-popular yellow and black Italian bees, together with all the supplies you'll need to set up your apiary hobby. The Nature Society, Griggsville, Ill. 62340.

"Be Kind to Animals, Or I'll Bite Ya" bumper sticker ($2) or the message of your choice, Walter Drake, Drake Building, Colorado Springs, Colo. 80940.

Bird-lover gifts from Duncraft Wild Bird Specialists, 15 S. Main St., Penacook, N.H. 0331. Takes Master Charge and BankAmericard. Flight deck feeder, room for a full meal (seed, fruit, dabs of peanut butter and cornmeal mix) plus a drinking or bathing pool, $9.95. This outfit has many different kinds of feeders to attract various birds such as clinging birds, songbirds, even a feeder for a second-story bedroom. Suction cup mount allows feeder to rest on glass window upstairs where other feeders would be inaccessible, $5.95.

A REAL OSTRICH egg, cradled by three solid brass giraffes, $57, American Express, P.O. Box 754, Great Neck, N.Y. 11025.

For $800, Neiman-Marcus of Dallas, Tex. (P.O. Box 2968, 75221) offers a mini-arboretum to its well-healed customers: One, 2-to-4-foot tree in a 3-gallon container will be sent out on a tree-of-the-month arrangement. Some of the species include the scholar tree (Sophora japonica) silver bells (Halesia carolina) and witch hazel.

Here's my favorite, I already purchased one for a budding Jacques Costeau for Christmas. The latest craze in little pets is the hermit crab. It does not bite unless you try to kiss it. I found, plus no barking at 4 a.m., no car chasing, fur on the furniture, digging in the yard, or flea and tick problems. All you need is a goldfish bowl, some vermiculite, a piece of wood for exercise, a scallop shell for fresh water, sea salt, an extra shell or two so the crab can change shells at will and a plant mister. Eats granola. Contact your local pet shop or write Chumsa, 7400 Gulf Blvd. St. Petersburg Fla. 33706.

Holiday parties take planning, work

Carolyn Murray

Your home

Let's get up a petition for smaller parties this holiday season. It's really worth our political action!

The favored party plan begins like this: Six to eight interesting people. Limited preprandial refreshments. First course in the living room. Main course and salad at table. Dessert and postprandial refreshments at leisure back in the living room.

Not every private domain has separate and equal space for elegant dining and expansive conversing. So we have to face reality and consider a terrace, porch balcony or sofa-chair grouping as potential party headquarters.

SOMETIMES "going in" to dinner means no more than stepping from one carpeted area to another, as in the room illustrated today. A lot has to happen in today's interiors, but our choice of furnishings can aid rather than hinder party-giving.

PARTY PRINTOUT. This attractive batiktype print on chair and loveseat helps establish an area where people are comfortable. Two carpets help define the dining area from the living room.

For example, the shape of the table shown is octagonal. It takes a bit less space than a rectangular one. Also the see-through plate-glass top seems to eat up less space. The wicker and chrome chairs, by Selig, are the first to be whipped over to the living area when conversation gets interesting.

Room colors and patterns affect people, too. Here one striking fabric is used on Selig's matching love seat and sofa. In black, white, bone and cinnamon, it's a strong background, not wishy-washy.

Party-givers definitely should not pretend there's no mess or trouble to party-giving. Everybody knows it's hard work! So make the mess and clean it up as you go. Allow one guest to help in the kitchen. Those extra hands will shorten the time you are out of action.

People are the most important ingredients at a party. And they feel uneasy if the host is missing from the action. Often you are the only person known to all guests. You must be the catalyst for the group.

So whether space is small or grand, the first step to a good party is to create a tapestry of comfortable people and palatable food. Then if yeasty action takes place and good feelings rise into conviviality, you'll also have a great party!

The doctor says

Change life style to prevent ulcers

Ten years ago in the fall, I developed a bleeding ulcer in the duodenum, and after several blood transfusions and a bland diet, the ulcer healed. Last spring, I was hospitalized with another bleeding ulcer and, after six weeks, it also healed.

Is it true that ulcers flare up in the spring and the fall? Do doctors really know what causes them? And, having been cured, is it necessary to avoid certain foods and drinks and continue antacids?

Any suggestions you have would be greatly appreciated, as I certainly don't want to develop another bleeding ulcer if I can prevent it.

As far as I am concerned, "once an ucler patient, always an ulcer patient." That means you should adapt your life style to prevent recurrences as they tend to recur in the spring and fall. This is not an old wives' tale — or, at least, if it is, it is a valid one.

You should avoid caffeine-containing drinks because caffeine stimulates the production of acid digestive juices. These include coffee, tea, colas and chocolate beverages. Chocolate in any form contains caffeine. You should avoid alcohol. Alcohol is a powerful stimulant to the producion of acid digesive juice.

Otherwise, sensible eating habits are usually all that is required. I would avoid strong spices, but moderate spices or moderate amounts are all right. A heavily spiced Mexican meal might not be. The current thinking is that what an ulcer patient eats is not so important, but whenever complications arise, bland feedings are still used.

You may not need to take any antacids, but your doctor may want to test your production of stomach acid to see if it is high and would warrant some regular use of such a medicine.

I should add to the list of dont's for your life style: DON'T SMOKE.

Stress is important as a factor in causing ulcers. If your life style includes too much stress, try to minimize it if you can. If a person has a stressful life style and doesn't change it, any form of treatment is not likely to be successful.

I should add that you should avoid aspirin and all of the easily obtainable popular medicines that contain aspirin. With a history of two bleeding ulcers, you don't need to take anything that decreases the blood's natural ability to clot.

No, doctors do not know exactly what causes ulcers, but we do know the company ulcers keep — stress, coffee, cigarettes and alcohol. We know that once an ulcer occurs that unless the excess stomach acid that is usually part of the picture is adequately neutralized, the ulcer will not heal promptly. Change your life style, and hopefully you can watch spring and fall come without fear of a bleeding ulcer.

Cracked ice candles easy to make at home

Dear Roberta: When my daughter was in kindergarten a few years ago, she brought home from school a beautiful candle she said had been made with ice cubes. It was rectangular and had hundreds of worm-like trails through it. I'd like to make some as gifts, and thought since this was a children's project you might know how. —Mrs. Herbert Pitts Candles made with plain or colored wax, cracked ice, and which use a milk carton for a mold are not only lovely but they're also easy to make at home. Chop up enough ice to fill a trimmed down quart-sized milk carton. Keep the ice chilled until you have melted two cups of paraffin in the top of an old double boiler. You can leave the paraffin white or color it by melting an old crayon into it. Stand in the center of the carton an old candle — which will serve as the wick — and support it by filling the carton around it with the chopped ice. Quickly pour in the melted wax. When the wax has hardened, pour out the water, and peel off the carton. Voila! A wormy candle!

Dear Roberta: I spilled a bit of a cocktail on some velvet upholstery and the hostess came forward with a cloth dampened with sparkling soda. The stain came off immediately. Is there something in this that will take off other kinds of stains? —Aline Jeffries

Sparkling soda does do fantastic things if used quickly to remove stains on carpeting or upholstery. But no one knows why. Perhaps the secret is in the word "quickly." Speed is all-important in successfully picking up stains.

Dear Roberta: With three adults in our house taking turns in caring for two sick children, confusion reigned as to when, or if, we had given them their prescribed doses of medicine. The solution to the problem was simple: we taped to the refrigerator a daily schedule of medicines each child was to take. Whichever one of us took care of a dosage checked it off with a pencil. —Marilyn Oakes

Weddings

Donna Quast– David Bauer

After a week's honeymoon in Lake Placid, N.Y., newlyweds Donna Anne Quast and David Alan Bauer are making their home in New York while David serves a tour of duty with the Navy. They were married in a double ring ceremony Oct. 22 in Calvary Baptist Church, Schaumburg. A reception at O'Hare Inn followed.

Donna, a graduate of Schaumburg High School and McCormick College, Chicago, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonhardt Quast, Schaumburg. David, also a graduate of Schaumburg High, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bauer, Hanover Park.

For the 4 p.m. service Donna chose Lora Lee Nazimek, Villa Park, as maid of honor. Her bridesmaids were the groom's sisters, Cheryl and Bev; Joanne Terrie, Chicago; Roseann Newcomer, Schaumburg; and the bride's cousin, Sandra Ward, Arlington Heights. Junior bridesmaids were Donna's cousins, Karen Bohn, Schaumburg, and Cindy Briggs, Mount Prospect. Three-year-old Sherrie Swaback, Long Grove, was flower girl.

Chuck Miles, New York, was best man, and ushers included Kenneth Lowecki, Schaumbufg; Michael Strawn, Randy Erickson and Larry DeGeorge, all of Hanover Park; and David Robinson, Streamwood. Junior ushers were the groom's brother, Steven, and the bride's cousin, Mark Bohn, Schaumburg. Jamie Harrison, 6, Addison, was ring bearer.

'The Gathering' a heart-warming film

"The Gathering" is proof that a powerful cast giving solid performances can turn a sentimental and trite script into a heart-warming work of art.

The two-hour movie, which airs at 8 p.m. Sunday on Channel 7, offers the kind of fare even Scrooge would expect at the outset of the Christmas season.

The drama, which probably will secure a place for itself as a perennial holiday tearjerker, serves to remind us of the many blessings for which we should be grateful without hitting viewers over the head with the tragedy of one man and his family.

Edward Asner, who has proved himself one of the finest and most versatile actors on television today, portrays a New England tycoon who learns from his doctor just before Christmas that he has only a few months to live.

So, the gruff and headstrong executive Adam Thornton decides to make amends with the family he walked out on some four years earlier.

He becomes a humble but not a self-pitying man, standing on the doorstep of the home where he became alienated from his family because of trivial disagreements and heapings of pride.

He asks his wife, who is portrayed by Maureen Stapleton with a proper amount of hesitancy and mixed feelings, to help him reunite their lost family at Christmas. But he sets one stipulation: that the children are not to be told about his fatal condition.

"Certain aspects of my life are not in order," Thornton admits aloud like a reminiscing German general. He sets out to make peace with each of his children and right a lifetime of wrongs in just a few weeks' time.

One son is a ruthless lawyer; another is a carpenter who fled to Canada to escape military service in Vietman and his father's patriotic wrath at home. One daughter is a successful, vibrant career girl; the other struggles with an unsuccessful husband.

A Christmas dinner table blessed with food and surrounded by grandchildren he has never seen or touched becomes one man's reconciliation with the world.

Although "The Gathering" is a potentially pitiful story, the actors and the production staff have avoided overkill.

None of the scenes are terribly distressing. The tearful hugs and kisses are largely expressions of joy. Family members, near strangers secretly have longed for the comfort and companionship of each other.

The sadness of the story hits home every time the wife looks into her husband's eyes, struggling with the strange feelings of bewilderment and gladness.

In that look is the message of the table and the reminder that every good Christmas story, from "Miracle on 34th Street" to Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol," drives home each year: It is a shame that people wait until it's too late to say "thank you," to say "I love you" and to share that precious gift of time.

Thornton discovers this while standing in the dark chill on a snowy lawn Christmas Eve shooting fireworks with his grown son as they throw their arms around each other's shoulders, laughing like two mischievous schoolboys.

He discovers this while cradling his infant grandson as he is christened and sharing silent thoughts with his wife in the illumination of Christmas tree lights and a roaring fireplace.

It's anything that means sharing with others before it's too late. "The Gathering" may not be a revelation or a profound script, but it's a dignified production that will leave viewers with a precious gift.

'4th network' programs

Independent television station officials in Chicago remain hopeful for original "fourth network" programing next year although producers of a special "Star Trek" and movie package have postponed the due dates on their projects.

Rich Frank, president of Paramount Television's distribution division, says a remake of the weekly "Star Trek" and a collection of first-run made-for-television movies he has promised independent television stations throughout the country will not be ready until fall 1978.

Frank originally had slated the three-hour Saturday night package of original programing to begin airing in April or May.

Production on the new "Star Trek" series already has started in Hollywood, with all of the original cast members participating except for Leonard Nimoy as Mr. Spock.

The problem has been partially in selling the package to independent stations that are affiliates of either ABC, CBS or NBC and under contract to air network programing.

"The network affiliates are as important to the financial success of the project as important to the financial success of the project as the independent stations are. We need a mix of support from both to be able to underwrite the project," a Paramount spokesman said.

While the networks are pressuring their affiliates against subscribing to outside programing, support from national advertisers also has been low, the Paramount spokesman said.

Officials of WGN-TV, Channel 9 in Chicago, say they are disappointed over the delay in the project but are certain that Paramount's alternative network programming effort eventually will materialize. WGN, one of the country's largest and most powerful independent television stations, is a major subscriber to the Paramount project as well as "Operation Prime Time," which also is producing first-run programming for and with the financial support of independent stations.

"We are very hopeful of these projects. We feel they are very important," said Sheldon Cooper, WGN general manager, but he admitted that the projects debuting next fall will be up against an onslaught of new programming from the networks at the start of a new season, which may lessen its chances for survival.

TV NOTES:

WMAQ-TV's critic-at-large, Ron Powers, will continue offering his insights on the station's weeknight news after he has moved on to New York early next year to begin working on a second book on "celebrities." Powers will tape his viewpoints at the NBC-owned station in New York for airing several times each week.

National television viewership, which is plummeting at the moment, may pick up if Americans resort to the kind of television being enjoyed by Britons and Italians. Viewers in Great Britain were stunned this week when bleeps interrupted normal programing and the "voice of Asteron" broke in with a message for earth. "All your weapons of evil must be destroyed," the male voice warned. "You only have a short time to learn to live together in peace."

"Captains Courageous"

While British police were trying to find out the origin of that message, Italians were delighting in a late-night strip quiz show. The quiz show features a well-dressed woman who takes off an article of clothing every time a homeviewer calls up with the correct answer to questions such as "when did Julius Caesar conquer Gaul?"

TV HIGHLIGHTS:

• Frosty the Snowman takes a wife in "Frosty's Winter Wonderland" at 7 p.m. Saturday on Channel 7 while "Nestor, the Long-Eared Christmas Donkey" is riled by his animal friends in the manger at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 7.

• Andy Griffith returns as the small-town California police chief, Abel Marsh, this time to battle a destructive chemical spillage in "It's Deadly" at 8 p.m. Saturday on Channel 5.

• WGN, Channel 9, premieres the miniseries, "The Fight Against Slavery" at 5:30 p.m. Sunday. The BBC version of the rise and fall of slavery in the British Empire continues at 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday.

• Karl Malden stars as the rugged captain of a fishing scooner who sets out to teach an arrogant teen the lessons of manhood in the television version of Rudyard Kipling's "Captains Courageous" at 6 p.m. Sunday on Channel 7.

• Andrea McArdle and the entire cast of the entire cast of the Broadway musical "Annie" join in a songful "Annie Christmas Show" at 7 p.m. Sunday on Channel 5.

• A pageant of show business stars participate in the "Las Vegas Entertainment Awards" at 8 p.m. Sunday on Channel 5.

New local theater group gives vibrant 'Celebration'

by SCOTT FOSDICK

Review/theater

Mount Prospect gave birth to a new theater group Friday night with a vibrant, bursting performance that promises interesting things for the future of theater in the Northwest suburbs.

The group is Theater on the Mount, and its first production is "Celebration," a musical by Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt, who also wrote "The Fantasticks."

"Celebration" is a modern-day fable of virtuous poverty-stricken youth versus jaded old age. In this sense it is an appropriate vehicle for director Frank Del Giudice and his band of winning young thespians.

Del Giudice, a 23-year-old forklift driver and Illinois State University graduate, has great hopes for Theater on the Mount. Friday he showed several reasons why his hopes are well founded.

THE BRIGHTEST of these are Gary Cole and Joseph Schaedel.

Schaedel plays the Orphan in this ode to youth. The role couldn't have been better played if Del Giudice had cast John-Boy himself. Schaedel's cheeks are roses, his eyes are lollipops and he moves with the grace of a leprechaun. Though still in high school, he is certainly a talent to watch.

Cole, as the Orphan's wily mentor, has a more citified charm. With his rock gestures and electrifying voice, he comes straight from the mold of the teeny-boppers' current idol, Peter Frampton.

Despite these and other dynamic performances, the musical demands too much from an inexperienced company.

The staging is inventive, but too many other production qualities are lacking. The costumes of the chorus are too brown for the brown set, the lighting is far too dim and most of the voices sound weak compared with Cole's and Schaedel's.

IT'S TOO BAD, because there's enough talent on stage to give a thoroughly solid production of something less ambitious. Luckily, this is what Del Giudice wants to do with the group in future productions. He says he is interested in staging serious, small-cast productions of classics. "The kind of stuff that is known, but isn't done very much," he says.

Unfortunately, he wasn't given his head with the first production but instead was encouraged to put on something more marketable. It's a tribute to his and his co-workers' considerable talents that they did so well.

As the lead song of the musical proclaims, "There's a tiny seed and it's going to grow."

'No, No, Nanette' taps to a tune of mediocrity

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

Review/theater

You've got to hand it to the cast of "No, No, Nanette," the vintage musical that opened Friday night at Palatine's Cutting Hall. Not only did the Music Onstage troup have to wade through a hackneyed plot, but it was accompanied by a nine-piece orchestra that progressed from amateur to embarrassing.

Yet despite the less than perfect trappings, Music On-Stage manages to pull out an enjoyable, if flawed, musical.

Much of the credit goes to the cast's near-professional caliber. Yes, the gestures and inflections are often too broad, even for this 1927 piece of fluff. But nearly every actor earned a good share of guffaws and the singing in this production rivals that in many a downtown show.

KERRY HILL, as Nanette, the poor little girl who never has any fun, fected innocence to her role. She's brings a clear soprano voice and unafconvincing in her quest to break out of her aunt and uncle's sheltered New York City home and sample the wickedness of Atlanta City, where "puffing cigarets and sipping cocktails" are the evil pastimes.

Don J. Orlando is equally solid as Nanette's protective boyfriend and obnoxious football hero Tom Trainor. The duets between him and Miss Hill are delightful, though they have to struggle to survive their "musical" accompaniment.

"No, No, Nanette" itself is memopredictable plot pulls no real surrable only for its campy value. The prises, but it isn't often that you hear expressions like "cracker Jack," "the cat's pajamas" and "non of your beeswax." In the title song, the main attraction is a chorus that serenades Nanette and Tom with pom pons and white cards that spell out, "No, No, Nanette." Silly, to be sure — but silliness is all to be expected.

There is some entertaining choreography interspersed with the madness, in "No, No, Nanette." During "I Want to Be Happy" nearly the entire cast tap-dances their way through the entire number, with nary a click out of place. It's a certified show-stopper.

The production notes to "No, No, Nanette" extol the show's "simplicity, wholesomeness and sense of fun." It's a little too simple for my taste, but it is fun.

LUMINARIA

Long ago people in Mexico burned small stacks of wood so Christ could see his way on Christmas Eve. Today they use luminaria — glowing candles in paper bags. You, too, can welcome friends to your house with luminaria.

Get some medium size paper grocery bags with flat bottoms. Fold down about 1½ inches at the top of the bag. Fold it down again. This will make a "cuff" at the top. Fill each bag about one-third full of sand. Push a fat candle into the sand. Put the bags in a row along your sidewalk or driveway. After dark, light the candles and watch the merry glow!

Lower animal forms guided by instinct

The 22-volume World Book Encyclopedia, is being sent to Lisa Reinoehl, 9, of Stratford, Conn., for her question:

WHAT ARE INSTINCTS?

Invertebrate animals, such as worms and insects, are more completely governed by instincts than are higher vertebrate animals, which adapt to their environment through some kind of learned behavior. The higher and more intelligent the animal, the greater is his capacity to learn. Man, having learned the basics of how to survive, has kept on learning.

Instinct is behavior that is inherited rather than learned. Instinct and instinctive behavior are terms used by scientists to describe activity that involves neither experience nor learning.

For a behavior trait to be truly instinctive, it must be typical of almost all members of at least one species of animal.

All animals perform certain instinctive actions and learned actions. Insects and crustaceans, such as crabs and lobsters, can learn only a little, so they depend almost completely on instincts to survive. The higher you go on the animal scale, the more it can learn and the less it will have to depend on instinct.

A baby chick, for example, will freeze motionless when any object appears near him. Instinctively, he will not move even if a leaf falls near him. Older chickens, on the other hand, have learned that a falling leaf cannot hurt them, so they do not react as they did when they were young. Learning has taken over for an instinct.

Fish depend more on instinct than birds, and birds depend on instinctive action more than mammals. In the human family, a baby will smile and suck instinctively, but as he grows older, most of his acts are learned.

For the most part, however, humans appear to have few or no instinctive patterns. Sucking and smiling as infants, for example, are considered to be reflexes by some scientists, and not instincts.

At one time in the past, scientists told us that tendencies toward many types of behavior were inborn and were passed from generation to generation. In modern times, however, experiments have shown that most human behavior is the result of maturation and learning.

In psychiatry, the term instinct denotes the innate biological drives and motivations necessary to fulfill human needs for oxygen, water, food, maintenance of body temperature and the avoidance of physcial injury.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to John Troulis, 12, of North Brunswick, N.J., for his question:

WHAT MAKES A PERSON LEFT-HANDED?

When a child is about 18 months old, he goes through a period of bilaterality when he shows no preference for either the left or right hand. This is followed at about the age of 2 with a definite preference for a dominant hand.

Most people are right-handed. However, about 6.5 per cent of adult males are left-handed and so are 4 per cent of female adults. The incidence is higher in children and decreases gradually as adulthood is reached.

What makes a person left-handed? No one is sure, exactly. It is found more often among twins than in the general population, with only one twin being left-handed.

A child should be allowed to develop his own natural handedness, be it left or right.

Send your question on a post card to Ask Andy in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Hts., Illinois 60006, making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to boys and girls 7 to 17.

Opening bid signals play

North and South bid to six clubs in truly elegant fashion. At least they took four rounds of bidding to get there.

Not that the 29 high-card-point slam is what might be called a real lay down. Declarer starts with two apparent losers. The ace of hearts and the king of diamonds.

The ace of hearts was led right away. West continued hearts and South was in. He spread his hand in a flamboyant manner and announced. "If West had 11 high-card points for his vulnerable opening bid I will just run off the rest of the tricks."

It was a friendly all-expert game and West conceded the slam immediately.

The play was a squeeze. South would start with a couple of rounds of trumps to make sure he had pulled them. Then he would cash his king of spades and ace of diamonds, play the last heart and run the rest of the trumps.

North's last three cards would be ace-10 of spades and queen of diamonds. West's would be the queen-jack of spades and king of diamonds. The last trump would squeeze poor West.

Jobless rate is 6.9% in nation; 4.6% in Illinois

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's unemployment rate was 6.9 per cent in November to mark the eighth consecutive month of virtually unchanged conditions in the U.S. job market, the Labor Dept. said Friday.

Unemployment in Illinois fell from 5 per cent to 4.6 per cent last month, the state labor department reported Friday. Gov. James R. Thompson said the jobless estimate probably is too low.

Thompson complained in a news release that the state faces a loss of $10 million in federal revenue-sharing grants because the U.S. Labor Dept. has not implemented a new formula for estimating unemployment.

Chicago saw a decline from 4.6 per cent in October to 4.4 per cent in November. The November, 1976, unemployment level was 6.7 per cent in the six-county Chicago area.

A TOP WHITE HOUSE aide said it will be impossible for the administration to reach its target of 6.6 per cent unemployment by the end of 1977. "That goal has been scrapped," the official said.

The jobless rate dropped from 7 per cent in October, but the department noted that unemployment has been in "the narrow range of 6.9 per cent to 7.1 per cent" since April.

In order to get the necessary economic expansion to reduce the unemployment rate in the year ahead, President Carter has promised substantial tax reduction to put more money in the hands of consumers and provide business with capital for new plants and equipment.

The department said the number of persons with jobs continued to grow, but not fast enough to keep up with the expansion of the workforce. Women and teen-agers continued to be among the hardest hit.

The department said total employment on nonfarm payrolls was 83.2 million in November. There were 6.8 million unemployed.

THE UNEMPLOYMENT figures released Friday showed an estimated 239,700 persons out of work in Illinois in November, with an unemployment rate of 4.6 per cent. That figure was down from 5.0 per cent in October and from 6.6 per cent in November, 1976, on a seasonally adjusted basis.

That adjustment is necessary because the estimated size of the labor force — the number of persons working or seeking work — changes during the year.

The department said the unemployment rate for adult women advanced slightly to 7.1 per cent and held steady for teen-agers at 17.1 per cent. But the situation for adult men improved with their rate declining 0.4 per cent to 4.9 per cent.

Dow Jones loses again

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks, torn in the crosscurrents of yearend tax selling and selected bargain hunting, wrapped up a dismal week with little change Friday. Trading was moderately active.

The Dow Joses industrial average, which lost 3.99 points Thursday, slipped 1.73 points to 823.98, giving it a loss of 20.44 points for the week. The closely followed average fluctuated in a three-point range all day.

Scores of institutional traders sold stock to establish losses for tax purposes while professional traders reportedly bought some of the most heavily sold issues.

Advances topped declines 735 to 662, among the 1,874 issues crossing the composite tape at 3 p.m. CST.

Big board volume totaled 21,160,000 shares, down from the 24,220,000 traded Thursday.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter at 3 p.m. CST totaled 22,542,200 shares, compared with 27,280,960 Thursday.

CUSTOMERS INCLUDING 4-year-old Kyle Rettberg of Elk Grove Village are encouraged to touch the toys at the new FAO Schwarz store in the Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg. It's all part of the philosophy that has made Schwarz known worldwide.

Shoppers toy with Schwarz ideas

by JOHN N. FRANK

Shoppers never will see "Do Not Touch the Toy" signs at the new F.A.O. Schwarz store in Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg.

"We like the customer to be able to see what he's getting. We like to leave the merchandise out so the customer can feel it and touch it," said Jack Engel, store manager at Schwarz's grand opening Friday.

Letting cutomers touch the toys, and stocking toys a cut above the average toy store fare, have given Schwarz the reputation of a rich man's toy store. Most of its stores have opened in exclusive areas, such as Fifth Avenue in New York City or Water Tower Place in Chicago.

BUT THE NEW York-based operation has decided to come to Woodfield because it believes in the Northwest Suburbs customers are ready for its approach to toy selling, said Ian McDermott, senior buyer.

"Most people know that we don't carry the mass merchandise," he said.

"But no matter what area of merchandising, people will always aspire and want to be able to afford something better," McDermott said.

"We do have the expensive image but at the same time we do have a full price range. You can buy a $1,000 item to an inexpensive meaningful toy," he said.

Its expensive image gives Schwarz a national following, McDermott said.

THE NUMBER OF customers at the Water Tower Place store was more than expected because of this reputation, Engel said.

"There's no question that any Fifth Avenue store is bound to have a following," McDermott said.

But the following is attracted by more than where the firm's flagship store is located, Engel said. It is attracted by the quality of the merchandise Schwarz sells.

"We handle a higher quality of merchandise. Steiff stuffed animals, for instance. It is the best stuffed animal you can have," Engel said.

"The only way to be known is through what you sell," he said.

The 115-year-old company, with 22 stores, avoids stocking toys that may be only 'Fads', McDermott said.

"Every newspaper today is filled with ads for toys which are really fad toys. We don't carry fad toys. Despite all the new items it's still the basic toys that remain popular. Nothing can take the place of a teddy bear," McDermott said.

Dow commodities plan proposed

Louis Rukeyser

KANSAS CITY — Everybody talks about where the Dow Jones Industrial Average is going to be next year, but up till now the ordinary investor had no convenient way to put his money where his mouth was. Now the Kansas City Board of Trade has come up with an ingenious new concept that could provide that opportunity as early as next spring.

The concept, already filed with the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, calls for a commodities futures contract based not on wheat or corn or soybeans, but on the Dow Jones Industrial Average. If approved, it could make Kansas City one of the legitimate financial nerve centers of the nation.

No wonder, then, that the rest of the money world has scarcely been beating the drums for Kansas City's initiative. I learned of it while lecturing in the Missouri city, and then discussed it at length with top officials of the Board of Trade. It has a number of potential detractors, including the Securities and Exchange Commission, other commodities exchanges and Dow Jones itself. But the officials expressed confidence that all would be surmounted.

As far as the SEC is concerned, J. F. Baumgartner, president of the Board of Trade, told me, "We're not saying anything to them, and they're not saying anything to us." The story behind this is that the Kansas City group expects to get an endorsement of its idea from the CFTC commodity regulators in February or March, and to swing into action shortly thereafter. The SEC, whose jurisdiction extends over the traditional stock markets, may well challenge the new operation.

THERE ARE existing precedents for futures contracts on financial instruments. The Chicago Mercantile Exchange has trading in Treasury-bill futures, and the Chicago Board of Trade has three such contracts: Ginnie Maes, Fannie Maes and commercial paper. Both exchanges have withstood SEC challenges that eventually were dropped.

As for the other commodities exchanges, they are unlikely to let such lucrative potential fall entirely into the lap of Kansas City without making a competitive effort. The giant Chicago Board of Trade is said to be "studying" the possibility of trading a similar contract on its floor.

The problem with Dow Jones appears to be strictly one of nomenclature. If the company won't let its name be used, Kansas City officials plan to refer only (and hardly mysteriously) to "the widely used 30 Industrial Stock Average."

Here's how the proposed contract would work: The contract would basically be 50 times the current average. For example, if the average was 825, and the contract was trading even with the average, the contract would be for $41,250. (The plan is to trade six different contracts simultaneously, expiring at three-month intervals up to 18 months away.)

SPECULATORS WOULD have to put up only $1,500 per contract in cash. Each point move in the average would be worth $50, and if the average went down as much as 10 points a contract buyer would be asked to put up another $500. So it could become an expensive proposition for a buyer (or seller) who guessed wrong on the market's immediate direction. Commissions would be relatively small: probably about $50 for the entire round-trip transaction.

FTC challenges Sucrets claims

The Federal Trade Commission Friday sued the makers of Sucrets throat lozenges for allegedly misrepresenting how well the product helps treat sore throats. The agency told a federal court in Washington that Merck and Co. Inc. Rahway, N.J., had violated a 1966 FTC order which prohibited it from making certain effectiveness claims about Sucrets. The earlier order forbids claims regarding the effectiveness of Sucrets to kill germs which might contribute to a sore throat, and prohibits claims that Sucrets will provide more than temporary relief. The civil penalty suit, which seeks fines of up to $10,000 for each advertisement allegedly in violation of the order, says that the company "misrepresented the relief afforded by Sucrets," the agency said.

Few contracts ending in '78

Contract bargaining in 1978 will be "light" in terms of major agreements to be renegotiated, but labor experts expect a "heavy" year for union demands, according to the conference board. Seven labor relations analysts for the non-profit research group noted fewer than two million workers, mostly in nonmanufacturing industries, will be involved in new contract talks compared with about five million this year. "But the 1978 bargaining situation may well be characterized by increased resistance from employers — especially those in more competitive industries — as well as a more restive union membership," the experts said.

GM head predicts more sales

General Motors chairman Thomas A. Murphy Friday predicted the auto industry will sell a record 15.5 million cars and trucks next year — a 5 per cent improvement over the current year's performance. In a year-end statement, Murphy said the sales improvement for next year is contingent on action by the Carter Administration and Congress to alleviate consumers' economic worries.

Profit-sharing plan rules out IRA

by ROBERT EDWARDS

I work for a company that has a profit-sharing plan. But during the past six years, either two or three years were unprofitable and the company could not put any money into the fund. I am approaching 60 and want to be sure I have some money to retire on when I am 65. Can I open up my own IRA and still be eligible for the company profit-sharing plan?

—B.W.

No. As long as contributions would have been made on your behalf if the profit-sharing plan where you work itself had received any contributions during the year, you are not eligible to establish your own Independent Retirement Account (IRA). The fact that the company made no profits to share does not make you eligible.

Referring to your article about drawing out part of the principal plus interest from savings, I wonder . . . Does the $1,800 withdrawal of capital in your example account for the loss of interest when that amount is withdrawn? Does the per cent of original principal withdrawn each year include the interest earned in the prior year?

—H.F.

The table accounts for reduced interest each year as the principal amount falls. Thus, in the example, one could continue to withdraw the $1,800 a year for 18 years. The per cent of original principal withdrawn does not include interest earned. Note the working, "original principal." In the example the original principal is the $60,000 in savings. When using the table, always consider the beginning principal as a constant amount. Attempting to add to or subtract from the amount of the original principal will throw off the tables.

How can I get a car buyer's guide that helps you buy new cars at a discount? It takes three weeks to get them.

Moneywise

by Robert Edwards

Although not a book, two places I know of can possibly help. Car/Puter, 1603 Bushwick Ave., Brooklyn, New York 11207 produces a printout of the costs for the car you want with all options you specify. The cost is $10. If you elect to buy the car, they deliver it for $125 over dealer's cost. Compuerized Car Costs, P.O. Box 2090 Elven Mile, Lahser Station Southfield, Mi. 48037 offers a similar service.

Stocks battered in active week

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks fell sharply this week in active trading punctuated by government reports that indicated the economic recovery had staying power and investor actions that said it wasn't necessarily so.

Also, the yearend tax-selling and window-dressing season has begun and this historically has produced erratic market swings. Observers got a taste of it this week.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average, whch rose 8.66 points last week, fell 20.44 points to 823.98 as institutions sold basic-industry stocks. Tuesday's 12.30-point plunge was the worst since it shed 19.75 points July 27.

The New York Stock Exchange common stock index dropped 0.99 to 52.34 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, containing some over-the-counter issues, shed 2.02 to 94.67.

Declines topped advances, 1,136 to 719, among the 2,126 issues crossing the composite tape.

Big board volume totaled 112,582,540 shares, compared with 95,772,870 during the four days of last Thanksgiving week and 103,683,888 during the same week a year ago.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 129,711,040 shares, compared with 109,470,960 last week.

It's the Canon NP-50. For low-to-medium copying requirements. It's engineered with rugged solid state technology. It's compact, produces clear, legible copies in statement, letter and legal size, on plain paper that can be written on immediately. And copy onto transparencies, labeled stock and colored paper.

It will replace copiers like the Xerox 660 and old fashioned electrofax copiers that use coated paper to produce copies that are tough to write on and read.

The Canon NP-50 is so reliable it greatly reduces your operating costs. And our suggested retail price of $2975 includes a handsome rollaway stand. Another savings.

Find out more about a whole new generation in copiers, call or write us today.

For $2,975,* it's the biggest bargain in plain paper copier history.

Hobart Rowen

LONDON — In his recent meeting with President Carter, the shah of Iran talked of giving "a break" to the troubled industrial world by attempting to keep oil prices down. After a trip to the Middle East, Treasury Sec. W. Michael Blumenthal also expressed hope that the oil-consuming world, which has not yet fully absorbed the massive price boosts of 1973-74, wouldn't have to face yet another.

But in a conversation on his way through London the other day, oil consultant Walter J. Levy took a much more pessimistic view. The shah may be reasonable for the time being, Levy figures, thus reinforcing the conservative views of Saudi Arabia.

Inevitably, though, Levy predicts that the colossal U.S. appetite for oil will go up, rather than down, "and undoubtedly we will be facing a shortage in physical terms some time in the 1980s." Levy's views on oil are given more attention by Western governments than those of any private analyst. His record isn't perfect (whose is?), but he's been right uncomfortably often.

THE IMPLICATIONS of Levy's forecast are both frightening and staggering. It means, first of all, that efforts to conserve energy and reduce imports, especially by the United States, will be a failure. The lack of congressional willingness to come to grips with the energy problem would seem to bear out Levy's judgment. And if, indeed, oil consumption goes up instead of down, he says, "There is likely to be a new price explosion in oil before the physical limit is met."

This scenario runs counter to some that predict a surplus, even a glut, of oil as new sources develop. But there have been no major proven finds of oil since the North Sea and the Alaska Slope, and little progress in developing alternatives to petroleum.

The more optimistic scenarios also assume that the Saudis, by far the biggest supplier, have developed a special "connection" with the United States that would inhibit any decision to keep the oil in the ground in order to prolong the life of an exhaustible asset.

The real thrust of Levy's analysis is that the world only has tricked itself into thinking that it has met the crisis posed by the oil cartel's price demands by "recycling" the Arab surplus money into loans for oil-importing countries.

Assuming an inflation adjustment plus additional real increases in the price, Levy predicts a world oil bill of more than $400 billion a year (in then current dollars), of which the United States would be buying $100 billion.

Hayes gets reprimand for punch

Ohio State Football Coach Woody Hayes Friday received a "public reprimand" from Big Ten Comr. Wayne Duke for punching a television cameraman during the Michigan-Ohio State game Nov. 19.

Hayes was reprimanded for "unsportsmanlike conduct."

Should Hayes violate the conference code on sportsmanlike conduct again within a year, he automatically will be suspended from coaching the buckeyes' next two games. Technically, Duke said, Hayes is on probation.

DUKE SAID HE issued the reprimand after discussions with the cameraman, Michael Freedman, Hayes, network officials and both the president and athletic director of Ohio State.

Ohio State President Harold Enarson said the school will not appeal the action because the school is "fully committed" to Big Ten rules.

But Enarson added that, "in all fairness, there is something that cries to be said. Over the year, the Ohio State teams coached by Woody Hayes have been noted for clean play and good sportsmanship. They are due in large measure to the encouragement of good sportsmanship by our entire athletic department and by Coach Hayes."

Woody Hayes

Duke said that his study of videotape not shown on network television showed that Freedman, at the time of the incident, was "between the 33-34 yard lines on the sidelines within 2-4 yards of Coach Hayes, in violation of official NCAA football playing rules.

"It should be noted steps are being undertaken by me to avoid future violations of this rule."

THE NCAA RULE restricts players, coaches and team personnel to the area between the 30-yard lines and requires other personnel to remain out of that area. Thus Freedman had encroached three or four yards into the forbidden area.

Duke said videotape showed that Hayes "took three steps and landed a blow to the right side of Freedman's body."

"It appeared that Freedman turned and warded off the blow with his left elbow. He did not fall and he remained in the general area," Duke said. "At the time of the blow, it appeared he had one foot straddling the sidelines."

Duke said the videotape also showed four policemen in the same area, "two of them talking behind Hayes," and taking no action to protect the 30-yard line from encroachment by nonteam personnel, the primary reason for their presence. He said there also was a still photographer on the field who moved "when he saw Hayes move toward him.

Hayes was the second Big Ten coach to be reprimanded this year and go on probation. Michigan's Bo Schembechler earlier was reprimanded for his comment on officials in the Duke game.

Bison take MSL opener

by JEFF NORDLUND

It is not often both coaches leave the basketball court pleased about a game, but that's what happened when Buffalo Grove defeated Fremd 58-42 Friday night.

"I'm happy with a win on the road any time," Bison coach Paul Grady said after his team had opened its defense of the Mid-Sburban League North Division title.

"If this had been at home, I might have done things differently," he said. "But I figure if we play the way we did tonight for the rest of the season, we'll be a force to be reckoned with."

IN THE LOSING locker room, things weren't so glum either.

"We hung in there pretty well," Fremd coach Mo Tharp said afterward. "If we'd made a couple free throws, it would've been a different game. We did an excellent job."

The double dose of optimism stems from what both coaches learned in their conference opener.

Grady learned he can count on senior guard Fred Kruse for more than taking the ball up the floor. Kruse turned into a scorer against Fremd with a game-high 25 points.

KRUSE LED Buffalo Grove through some shaky moments in the third quarter — when a one-time 17-point lead had shrunk to five — to tally 11 of his points in the final quarter.

"There was something missing in Kruse's first three performances this year," Grady said. "I said earlier I think he could be one of the top guards in the conference this season. I think his job today proves he can".

The Bison also got some big-point play from 6-foot-9 junior center Chris Molenaur, who scored 12 of his 18 points in the first quarter. Molenaur's six-of-six shooting in the opening period pushed Buffalo Grove to a 20-6 lead.

Tharp learned he can get some shooting from outside, something missing in earlier games, if his Vikings can take the ball inside now and then.

FREMD CENTER Drew Mize did just that against taller opponents in earning nine points. The 6-foot-6 junior's play helped open the way for forwards Dave McKinney with 11 points and Rob Dorsey with 10.

Dorsey's hot shooting from outside helped Fremd close the Buffalo Grove lead to 37-32 and 39-34 in the third quarter, but key hoops by Kruse pulled the Bison further ahead once more.

"We were gambling," Tharp said. "We heard they would probably try and take the ball underneath, so we sagged off. We stopped their penetration pretty well, too."

Grady figures his team to challenge for the North Division title again this year, but he is going to do it with a very young team.

"We're extremely young this year," Grady said. "We've got only two seniors in our top 10 players."

Forest View edges Mustangs

by DON FRISKE

Even though it only counted as one victory on the long Mid-Suburban League road, the Forest View Falcons came away with a sweet one Friday night.

They took their act to defending MSL South champ Rolling Meadows, where they opened the contest with a sloppy array of bad passes that gave them a 16-point deficit before the first half was completed.

But they survived the early adversity to put together a sparkling offensive attack in the second half en route to a 69-64 victory.

ACTUALLY, THE comeback surge waas sparked during the closing seconds of the first half after Kent Walker's three-point play gave the Mustangs the biggest bulge of the night at 38-22.

During those waning moments, the Falcons outscored their hosts 6-1 to pull within 11 points by the intermission.

"Hey, 11 points is a lot better than 17 or 18," said Glen Elms, the Falcon coach. "That was the key because it gave us some confidence."

It also put them in good control of things when play resumed as they reeled off a string of baskets to provide the type of battle that was lacking during the first half.

"THIS IS A GAME of momentum, and they started picking it up late in the game tonight," said Bill Weinberg, the Mustang coach. "We turned the ball over three times early in the third quarter and gave them the opportunity to get back in the game. We had the chance to put them away early, but we didn't."

The hot shooting of Tom Hopkins and Walker pushed the Mustangs out to their big lead. They combined for 32 of the team's 39 first-half points.

But those turnovers Weinberg is probably still thinking about came as the result of aggressive defense by the Falcons. They continually slapped the ball away from the Mustangs to hit a 10-2 blast midiway through the third period. That scoring streak narrowed the Mustang lead to 47-42.

As the pressure got hotter for the Falcons down the victory stretch, their shooting kept pace. They hit 14 of 29 shots taken in the second half and beat the Mustangs from the line, sinking eight of the final 10 free throws.

FOREST VIEW finally caught the Mustangs with 6:39 left in the game. A pair of free throws by Don Wiora tied the score at 51-51.

A minute later, Craig Chuipek's driving layup gave the Falcons their first lead of the contest. They enjoyed the feeling so much that the Mustangs could never regain the edge.

Two baskets by Jeff Martinski gave the Falcons a five-point advantage with less than a minute to play, and it was all over for Rolling Meadows.

Jeff Camron led the Falcon attack with 26 ponts while Walker (24) and Hopkins (22) paced the Mustangs.

It was a victory for the Falcons to remember. At least until another Friday night rolls around.

Bulls' bench sparks 107-102 road victory

INDIANAPOLIS — The Bulls' bench, led by third guard John Mengelt's season-high 18 points, gave the regulars a shot in the arm and the team a dose of adrenalin with a 107-102 road triumph over the Indiana Pacers Friday night in Market Square Arena.

The Bulls will carry the momentum into a five-game homestand over the next two weeks that involves Cleveland tonight, Washington, New Jersey, San Antonio and is capped by an important clash with Denver.

Mengelt, starting in place of the injured Norm Van Lier, delivered his key contribution at the outset of the third quarter when the Bulls stormed to a 20-6 advantage and inflated a 54-48 halftime edge into a 74-54 cushion.

BUT INDIANA, on the strength of muscleman Adrian Dantley's 30 game-high points, erupted for 13 unanswered points to chisel the deficit to just seven and finally to five several times during the final period.

Bulls' center Artis Gilmore, playing perhaps the most consistent ball of his career, saved seven of his team-high 27 points for the stretch drive to saddle the Pacers with their fourth straight loss and third in a row at home.

Chicago Coach Ed Badger had nothing but praise for his team.

"Artis was out of this world and our young guards really did a job. John Mengelt filled in very well for Van Lier and (Nick) Weatherspoon did a terrific job off the bench.

"In fact, all our bench played very well," Badger said.

With a crowd of 12,004 watching, the Bulls broke on top by six early in the game, but were victimized by a seven-point surge by the Pacers, who were spearheaded by Dantley's tough inside play.

But the Bulls, with sub Nick Weatherspoon and Wilbur Holland each tossing in eight first-half points, ran off six consecutive points of their own, taking a 20-17 lead on a Gilmore stuff.

THE PACERS, 7-13 and tied for last with Kansas City in the Midwest Division, counted Dantley's 14 points in the first half, 13 by John Williamson and nine from Chicago product Dave Robisch.

Prior to the game, Dantley was informed that he had been suspended for one game by NBA Comr. Larry O'Brien.

The former Notre Dame All-American was reprimanded for his actions following a game Wednesday night. First, he confronted Milwaukee Bucks forward Dave Meyers in a corridor under the stands and challenged him to a fight.

After the players were separated by policemen, Dantley charged into the Milwaukee Bucks' dressing room and attempted to assault Meyers. Dantley was restrained by the police and fellow players and a police officer was injured during the scuffle.

The Bulls, 11-9 on the season, got 16 points from Holland, 15 from Scott May and 14 from Weatherspoon. Backing Dantley's 30 for Indiana were John Williamson with 19, Robisch with 15 and 14 each by Dan Roundfield and Mike Flynn.

Pressure on for Bears to win in Tampa

by BOB GALLAS

TAMPA, Fla. — The Tampa Bay Buccaneers will be trying to "Win one for the Gibber."

The Bears will be trying to win one to stay alive.

Signs have popped up all over the Bucs' lockerroom, urging the win for the Gibber, ex-Bear coach Abe Gibron, who is now the chief assistant with the Tampa team and very popular with both the players and the fans.

"IF THEY WANT to do it for Abe, they better left me in there at left guard," Gibron quipped.

But while the Bucs still can laugh after 25 consecutive losses, there is little funny about Sunday's game as far as the Bears are concerned. A loss would all but eliminate them from playoff contention.

While many teams now are coming into Tampa motivated to win to avoid becoming the first team to lose to the Bucs, Bear coach Jack Pardee is glad he has more to think about.

"I'm glad that's not the only motivation we have," Pardee said, referring to Tampa's losing streak. "We're alive in the playoff race and have to win to stay that way."

ROOKIE RANDY Hedberg will start for Tampa at quarterback. Hedberg, who started the first two games of the season for the Bucs, will have to lead an offense that has scored just four touchdowns in its first 11 games.

Hedberg saw some action last week against the Falcons, who shut out the Bucs, the fifth time Tampa has been blanked this year. Former Bear Gary Huff started the game, his first after four games out with a knee injury.

"We've seen a limited amount of him (Hedberg) so it's hard to tell what he can do," Pardee said Friday. "He was down when he came in last week yet he came out throwing. He looks like he's heady and knows where to go with the ball."

TWO NEW STARTERS with familiar faces will be back in the lineup for the first time in a month for the Bears, Roland Harper at fullback and Doug Buffone at outside linebacker. Harper went down with a knee injury while Buffone had viral pneumonia.

Walter Payton apparently has re-

by RON COOK

Conant basketball coach Dick Redlinger stood quietly outside the visitors' locker room at Prospect High School. He was shaking his head in disbelief.

Redlinger had just watched his team drop a 56-42 decision to Prospect in a season opening game in the Mid Suburban League South Division. But this loss probably hurt Redlinger more than most. His Cougars gave the game away by totally collapsing in the second half after battling the Knights, the division's favorite, evenly in the first two quarters.

"Their press killed us in the third quarter," Redlinger said. "It shouldn't have bothered us like that. I don't understand it. I guess we just tried to break it too fast."

IT WAS A two-minute span in the third period that did indeed do the Cougars in.

Down 29-26 with five minutes left in the quarter, Prospect (3-2) exploded for 10 straight unanswered points to put the game away for all practical purposes. Jim Apuzzo, the game's high scorer with 16 points, sank two shots in the flurry, while Dave LaCosse, Paul Izban and super sub John Saye all connected on fastbreak baskets set up by Conant turnovers. The Knights took a 38-31 lead into the final period.

Whatever chances the Cougars (3-2) had to get back in the game, they threw out the window with some very erratic shooting. Conant went five minutes into the fourth quarter without a field goal before John Severson sank a layup. All in all, the Cougars hit but one two-pointer over an 11-minute stretch in the disastrous second half.

"We blew about seven layups in that stretch," said Redlinger, whose team is back in action tonight against Lake Park at home. "It's not that we didn't get the shots, we just missed the easy ones. If we would have made them, it would have been our night."

INSTEAD, the evening belonged to Prospect. It didn't look like it might end that way in the first two quarters, however, as the two teams were deadlocked at 24-24 at halftime.

"We came out with the full court press in the third quarter because we wanted to change the tempo of the game," said Prospect coach Bill Slayton. "I just didn't think much was going down for us in the first couple quarters. We missed a lot of easy tips.

"But I thought Conant played well. They'll bounce back and be in the division race before it's over. A few people have picked us to win, but there are a lot of balanced teams in our conference. That's why it is so important to try to win when you are at home."

Redlinger had to agree about the division's balance. "I think Prospect is as good as any of the others," he said, "but anyone can certainly beat anyone else. We played good enough ball in the first half tonight. If we played like that the whole game, we could have won."

But the Cougars didn't. It just wasn't their night.

Maine West crushes Waukegan

Maine West exploded for 15 unanswered points in the opening period and crushed Waukegan East, 58-46, in a Central Suburban League clash Friday night in Waukegan.

Warrior guard Tim Logisz pumped in eight of his game-high 26 points in the opening stanza to help erase a 6-2 Waukegan edge. West stormed to a 17-6 first-quarter lead and never looked back, stretching the advantage to 36-19 at the intermission.

Clicking on 18 of 35 shots from the floor and a healthy 22 of 29 from the free-throw line, Maine West controlled the tempo of the game, forcing numerous turnovers and poor shot selection for Waukegan.

Logisz, who added 10 of 10 from the free-throw stripe, was supported by Mike English's 12 points, nine from Carl Henk and eight by John Karabas.

The Warriors upped their record over the .500 mark to 3-2.

Luncheon today to honor grid contest winners

The winner of two expense-paid trips to Pasadena and the Rose Bowl football game will be selected today at a special luncheon in Schaumburg.

The Daily Herald will honor the weekly winners in the "Pick The Winners" football contest at The Lancer Restaurant at 12 noon.

Weekly winners who will attend the luncheon are Robert Anderson, Dave Cox, Al Otto, Mike Chernicky, Jack Cutlip, David McDaniel, Rich Leksander, Nicky Donofrio, Edward R. Tomashewski, Ray Owens, Pete Flatebo and Holly Ziemek.

The drawing will take place at the conclusion of the luncheon, and the winner will receive (two tour packages of) four days and three nights in Pasadena for the Rose Bowl. Arrangements are being handled by the Wayne Griffin Travel Agency.

The Daily Herald Sports Editor Bob Frisk will serve as master of ceremonies, and a film on Big Ten footbail will be shown.

Denver notches 11th home win with victory over Nets

David Thompson and Dan Issel teamed for 46 points to help Denver race to its 11th straight home-court win of the season, an easy 126-92 victory Friday night over the cold-shooting New Jersey Nets.

The Nuggets, leading the WBA Midwest Division with a 15-8 record, led by as many as 38 points.

Issel finished with 22 points — giving him 15,001 for his career — and was presented a game ball. He became the first Denver Nugget and the 26th player in NBA history to reach the 15,000 mark. Thompson scored a game-high 24 points and forward Bobby Wilkerson had 17 for the Nuggets.

High-point man for the Nets, who have won only three of 21 games this season, was forward Darnell Hillman with 19. The Nets, the last place team in the Atlantic Division, also received 14 points from reserve forward Mark Crow. High-scoring rookie forward Bernard King, who played with foul trouble throughout much of the game, managed just eight points.

ELVIN HAYES scored 29 points and grabbed 18 rebounds and Bob Dandridge scored 26 points in his first appearance in Milwaukee since he went to Washington as the Bullets defeated the Milwaukee Bucks 108-95.

The win was Washington's third in a row and seventh in its last eight games. Washington Coach Dick Motta was ejected from the game early in the second period while arguing with officials.

NBA report

Dandridge hit 14 points to give Washington a 26-23 lead at the end of the first period and Hayes scored 10 in each of the next two periods as Washington led 55-47 at the half and 84-76 after three periods.

Brian Winters equalled his season high for Milwaukee with 29 points while Marques Johnson had 21. Washington outshot the Bucks 55 per cent to 42 per cent in the first half and outrebounded Milwaukee 32-15.

DANDRIDGE was signed by Washington prior to this season as a free agent after playing out his contract with the Bucks, where he teamed with Kareem Abdul-Jabbar on an NBA title team.

Lucius Allen scored 22 points to lead six Kansas City players in double figures and give the Kings a 108-97 victory over the Detroit Pistons.

Allen scored 10 of his points and forward Scott Wedman added 12 in the third period to lift the Kings from a one-point halftime deficit to an 82-75 lead.

The Kansas City center tandem of Tom Burleson and Sam Lacey held Detroit's Bob Lanier to his season low, 15 points, in handing the pistons their seventh loss in the last eight games.

WEDMAN ADDED 18 points, Richard Washington 17, Ron Boone 16, Burleson 14 and Bill Ribinzine 10 as the Kings won just their second game in the last eight outings. M.L. Carr topped Detroit with 21 points.

Dennis Johnson and Gus Williams combined for 47 points to lead the Seattle SuperSonics to a 111-89 drubbing of the Boston Celtics.

The Sonics put the game out of reach in the second period, when they outscored the Celtics 37-21 and grabbed a 57-39 halftime lead. Williams led the scoring in that period with 16 points. The key to the Sonics' surge was a 10-point tear early in the quarter. In that scoring spree, Williams contributed six points, Slick Watts hit for four and Jack Sikma for two.

The only highlight of the evening for the Celtics came at the 7:28 mark of the third period when center Dave Cowens scored the 10,000th point of his career.

The effort by Johnson and Williams was supported by John Johnson and Marvin Webster, who contributed 14 points apiece for Seattle. High scorer for the Celtics was Jo Jo White, with 14. Cowens ended with 10 on the night.

The loss drops the Celtics' season record to 7-13. Seattle has now won two in a row under new Coach Lenny Wilkins, giving them a 7-17 season record.

Capitals streak 18 games to the bad

LANDOVER, MO. (UPI) — Dennis Maruk scored with 1:29 remaining Friday night to give the Cleveland Barons a 3-2 victory over the Washington Capitals.

Maruk took a perfect drop pass from Kris Manery and, after faking a slapshot, finished off the two-on-one break with a 10-foot wrist shot for his 14th goal of the season. The defeat extended Washington's winless streak to 18 games, while Cleveland improved its record to 7-13-2 in the Adams Division.

NHL report

Washington maneuvered back into the game on goals by Bob Sirois and Doug Gibson just 22 seconds apart in the third period. Sirois notched his 10th goal of the season when he took a Gerry Meehan centering pass and batted the bouncing puck past Baron goalie Gary Edwards. Seconds later, Gibson earned his first tally of the year when he quickly wristed a perfect Bill Collins feed into the bottom left corner of the Cleveland cage.

The Barons took a 2-0 lead at 4:41 of the final period when Rich Hampton eased a backhand deflection past Washington Goalie Jim Bedard, who was playing in his first NHL game after being promoted from Hershey of the American Hockey league earlier in the day. Mike Fidler put Cleveland ahead 1-0 in the first period when a Dave Gardner shot bounced off him and into the Washington net for Fidler's ninth goal of the season.

SHAWN'S STRETCH. Arlington High School's Shawn Donahue (52) uses his size to good advantage under the basket as Hersey's Scott Opels (23), Tom Sandlund (next to Donahue) and Curt Roy (35) move into position in Mid-Suburban League opener Friday night. Arlington rolled to an easy 90-59 victory.

Arlington cagers crush an inexperienced Hersey

by DAVE HESS

"Arlington and George Zigman (Arlington coach) put on a clinic," Hersey basketball coach John Lucas said following a 90-59 drubbing at the hands of the Arlington Cardinals.

"They ran, they hustled, they hit the open man. We learned a lesson tonight."

Led by 6-foot-9 Shawn Donahue's rebounding and Tim Dorsey's game-high 25 points, the Cardinals dominated every phase of the game, roaring to a 25-8 first quarter lead that only increased as the game progressed.

"This was our first game with everybody healthy," said Zigman. "It has to be the best game we've played all year. We could do no wrong."

Arlington hit the inexperienced Huskies (one returning letterman from last year) with a devasting fast break, forcing repeated turnovers and scoring points in bunches.

By halftime the Cardinals led by 27 points and everyone included in the scoring. Chuck Klein, who ended up with 17 points, figured in several breakaway layups along with Dorsey and Mark Schurak.

Chris DeSimone, back in the lineup from injury, played sparingly but was among the eight Cardinal players scoring in the first half. Donahue scored all of his 17 points in the first half.

Hersey's third-quarter efforts were limited to only one shot at the basket each trip as Arlington continued to control the boards.

Tom Sandlund, who led the Huskies with 11 points, was the most accurate, hitting two of three of his shots in the period. Arlington countered with 10 points from Dorsey and eight from Schurak to increase their lead to a whopping 45 points to start the fourth quarter.

Zigman went to his reserves early, pulling the starters one at a time, each to a boisterous ovation from the home fans. It was only then that Hersey was able to cut into the huge lead as Lucas also went to his bench. Hersey won the battle of the reserves in the fourth quarter, 25-10, but by that time it was too little, too late.

Throughout the game Hersey could not contend with Arlington's superior height advantage and was further hampered by a Cardinal zone press that never stopped playing aggressively. Reserves Doug Harth, T. R. Moore and Scott Kempton filling in for DeSimone played as if they wanted more time.

Arlington takes its perfect MSL 1-0 record, 3-2 over-all, to Wheeling for a tough game Tuesday night.

Lucas intends to practice his Huskies hard for a week and then will take on Elk Grove at home Friday night.

Elk Grove beats Hawks in MSL South opener

by VIC NOVAK

The Elk Grove and Hoffman Estates basketball teams are so alike they almost could be the same team. Both are short (no one taller than 6-foot-4) and inexperienced (no returning starters). Also, both employ 2-1-2 or 1-3-1 zone defenses.

Another similarity occurred in Friday's conference opener between the two Mid-Suburban League South Division rivals.

Just as in their non-conference clash at the Lake Park Thanksgiving Holiday Tournament Elk Grove staged a late second quarter blitz that gave them the win.

THIS TIME THE Elk Grove Grens defeated the Hawks 52-44. Back on Nov. 23, the Grens triumphed, 46-43.

Friday night Hoffman was trailing 21-19 two minutes before halftime.

However, that margin became a 27-19 deficit as Grens Mark Angellotti sank a free throw, Tom Rupley two charity tosses and Ron Sanders a free throw and basket.

Although the Hawks came as close as four points in the third period, they were never able to regain the lead.

ELK GROVE led 39-27 after the third period and allowed Hoffman to come no closer than seven points (47-40) in the fourth period.

Both coaches agreed Elk Grove's late second period spurt and Hoffman's inability to overcome the Grens in the third period was the game's deciding issue.

Elk Grove coach Ken Grams said he told his team at halftime that "the most important part of the game would be the first three minutes of the third quarter.

"We had established something at the end (of the second period) and we wanted to establish it in the third quarter," Grams said.

"We were just getting one shot and were getting only one rebound," Hoffman coach Jerry Segebrecht said. Elk Grove outrebounded Hoffman, 34-27, including 24-14 on the defensive boards.

The Grenadiers defense also gave the Hawks fits all night.

"They did an excellent job on defense," Segebrecht admitted. "We had a tough time getting the ball inside." Elk Grove allowed Hoffman to shoot only 31 per cent from the field (17-52). The Grens shot 44 per cent (19-43).

Final totals had Hawk Tom Dowling as the game's leading scorer with 16 points. Mark Palmer and Doug Oslance added 14 and 10, respectively, for the Hawks.

Elk Grove was keyed by Bill Norwood's 14, Tim Mimnaugh's 12 and Angellotti's 11.

Cole's last-second basket gives Palatine triumph

by ART MUGALIAN

History repeating itself in a Palatine-Schaumburg basketball game, as it did Friday night in Palatine's new gym, would be about as off-the-wall as Bob Cole's last-second shot that give the Palatine Pirates a come-from-behind 46-45 victory.

It was just the fourth time in nine seasons that the teams have met — and the first time for Pirate coach Ed Molitor — but twice now a wavy-haired Palatine lad named Cole has put in the final bucket to snatch jubilation from the jaws of gloom. Four seasons ago, it was Bob Cole's brother, Scott, who did the deed for Palatine.

THIS TIME, THOUGH, it was Bob, a 6-foot-2 junior, who grabbed teammate Chris Plazak's errant jumper from the top of the key and put in a short bank shot over Schaumburg's John Chmiel. The basket came with just two seconds left, culminating a last-ditch Pirate rally.

"Plazak's shot came right back at Cole," said losing coach Joe Breault with a shrug. "He didn't even have to move for it. It didn't even hit the rim."

Palatine, now 2-3, had cut the Saxon lead to 45-44 at 1:58 when junior Rick Jessen hit from the baseline for two of his 12 points. The ball changed hands three times before Palatine finally got the game-winning opportunity.

"That was a struggle," Molitor said. "Anytime a team plays us with a half-court press, we're gonna have trouble, but we had success with it in the first half because we were beating them down the floor."

PLAZAK KEYED the first-half surge that saw the Pirates jump out to a nine-point lead. The red-haired senior tossed in 13 points before intermission, 11 of them in the first quarter.

Schaumburg, now 1-3, was cold from the field, especially 6-7 John Chmiel who entered the game with a 30-point average. Teammate John Moran picked up the first-half slack with 10 points, but Moran Failed to score in the second half.

Chmiel, who had 10 of his game-high 18 points in the second half, joined with Jack Breen to bring the Saxons back into contention. Trailing 37-30 with four minutes left in the third quarter, Schaumburg cut it to two on a three-point play by Breen and a rebound bucket by Chmiel. Breen had 14 points for the night.

CHMIEL, WHO was credited with six blocked shots, stole the ball twice in a 60-second span of the fourth period and both times Breen followed with driving layups as the Saxons forged into a 41-40 lead with 4:30 to go. Chmiel hit a short jumper a moment later and the Saxons were up by three.

Palatine's Steve LeBreck traded a pair of free throws with Chmiel before the final drama was played out.

"They outplayed us in the first half," Breault said, "but we came back. Still, there's two halves to a ball game."

Two halves and, it seems, always a Cole.

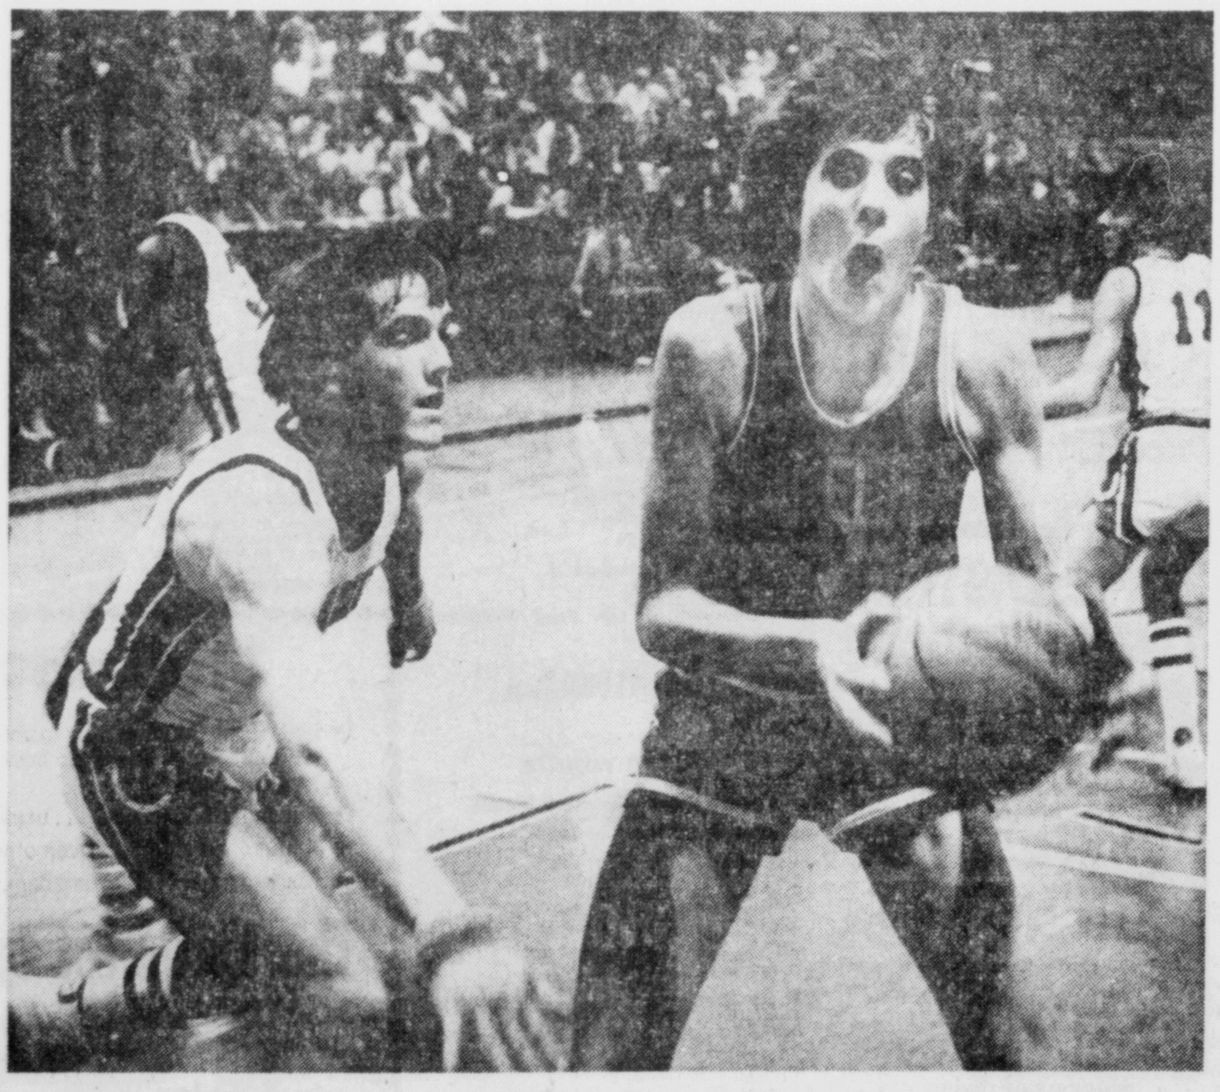
Elk Grove's gymnastics unit beats Prospect

After suffering a tough season-opening loss to Buffalo Grove, the Elk Grove gymnastics team came back with an impressive victory over Prospect Thursday night.

The Grenadiers defeated the Knights, 131.79 to 112.87, with Elk Grove's Dick Allen pacing the all-around competitors with an average of 6.59.

"We've got a lot of potential, but I don't know how high we'll go. We're lacking depth in some events," said Fred Gaines the Gren coach. "We have the potential to break 140."

In addition to winning the all-around title, Allen won vaulting with an 8.0. The high score for the meet was Gren Mike Peters' 8.15 on side horse.



SINGING IN THE LANE. Wheeling's Jim Lockefeer plays keep-away from Barrington's John Tomlinson during exciting 66-65 Bronco triumph in the league opener for both teams.

Norton's manager blasts Ali, WBC

NEW YORK — Ken Norton's manager, Bob Biron, Friday blasted the World Boxing Coumcil for retreating from a pledge it had made to vacate the heavyweight title if Muhammad Ali did not agree by Jan. 5 to fight a rematch with Norton.

"Jose Sulaiman (WBC president) told us and told the press in Las Vegas and New York that the WBC had set the Jan. 5 deadline and was gong to be firm in its stand with Ali," Biron said by phone from his home in La Jolla, Calif. "Now, in effect, they've pushed it back to April 7. It's obvious it's getting harder to take the WBC seriously about anything."

The WBC met in Madrid Thursday and decided to require Ali only to sign a paper by Jan. 5 committing him to negotiate with Norton for a fourth bout. The WBC also sanctioned Ali's Feb. 15 title defense in Las Vegas with inexperienced Olympic light heavyweight champion Leon Spinks and said if Ali wins that fight, he must sign with the top-ranked Norton by April 7 or lose his title to Norton. Of course, that could change, too.

Zarate retains bantamweight crown

MADRID — Mexican Carlos Zarate retained his WBC world bantamweight crown Friday night, flooring Juan Rodriguez twice before the Spanish challenger gave up in the fifth round. Rodriguez, a longtime amateur fighter with only 10 previous professional bouts, was overwhelmed by the powerful punches of Zarate.

The champ, 25, selected only two days ago by the WBC as Fighter of the Year, did the most damage with slamming left hands to Rodriguez midsection. The first one sent the challenger to the canvas in the third round. In the fourth, Rodriguez dropped to his knees after taking another left to the stomach.

By the fifth, the bout was clearly over and Zarate rushed in for the kill. He blasted Rodriguez with shots to the head and body until the Spaniard threw up his hands in defeat.

Seales takes unanimous decision

Sugar Ray Seales, Seattle, Wash., won the U.S. middleweight championship Friday night with a unanimous decision over Doug Demmings, Minneapolis, Minn.

Seales and Demmings went 15 rounds before the unanimous three-judge decision for the title, sanctioned by the U.S. Boxing Association.

Two earlier fights were decided by first-round knockouts. Chuck Gardner, Minneapolis, defeated Baker Tinsley, Louisville, Ky., by KO at 2:41 and George Mostardini, Chicago, defeated Henry Williams, Bensen, Ind., with KO at 1:08.

Gerard indicted in horse race coup

MINEOLA, N.Y. — Dr. Mark Gerard, who has been suspected of switching horses in a Sept. 23 race at Belmont Park Race Track to reap a $77,000 betting profit, was indicted Friday, an attorney for the veterinarian reported.

One of Gerard's lawyers, Neil Shayne, said Nassau District Attorney Denis Dillon had notified him to produce Gerard for arraignment in county court in Mineola on Monday morning. Shayne said he was told the grand jury handed up a multiple indictment, but he refused to disclose the specific charges.

Dillon declined any comment, explaining that, under the law, he cannot reveal the indictment until after the arraignment. Gerard has engaged noted criminal lawyer F. Lee Bailey as his defense counsel, but it was not clear whether Bailey will be in Mineola for the Monday arraignment.

Lopez, Strange charge in darkness

LARGO, Fla. — Youngsters Curtis Strange and Nancy Lopez pulled to within three strokes of leaders Jerry Pate and Hollis Stacy Friday as darkness forced suspension of the second round of the Mixed Team Golf Championship.

Rains had forced a two-hour delay in the morning tee times and darkness fell before the entire field in this $200,000 his-and-hers tournament could complete the second round. Play resumes at 8 a.m. today.

Barrington taken to wire by Wheeling

by ANDY KEHE

The Wheeling Wildcats welcomed coach Gary Cook and his Barrington Broncos to the Mid-Suburban League Friday. But not with a smile on their faces as the Wildcats were nudged in the final second of play, 66-65, in the Barrington fieldhouse.

The contest see-sawed back and forth the entire fourth period with neither team enjoying more than a two point advantage. Bruce Henricksen popped two free throws to knot the game at 65-65 with 35 seconds left, then, following a Wheeling turnover, the Broncos ran the clock down to four seconds and called time.

When play resumed, Henricksen let fly with a jumper from the corner that missed, but he was fouled by Wildcat Steve Majkowski with no time on the clock. Henricksen calmly sank the free throw to ice the game for Barrington.

THE BRONCOS wasted no time going to their 6-foot-8 junior standout Ike Person as he drifted into the lane and canned a 10-footer to give Barrington a 2-0 lead. Jim Lockefeer tied it with a fadeaway jumper to set the stage for a most thrilling night of basketball.

The highlight of the first period was a breakaway slam dunk by Person, but it did not rattle the Wildcats as they stayed close to the Broncos by forcing bad passes. Ron Cacioppo closed the first quarter with a nifty layup on a feed from Henricksen making the score 19-17, Barrington.

Wheeling guard Steve Majkowski went on a shooting spree early in the second period but his dominance was offset by hot shooting and fire ballhandling by Henricksen who along with Majkowski had 10 points in the period.

Baskets by Bill Hugo, Henricksen and John Tomlinson propelled Barrington to a 33-26 lead but the Broncos began to get into foul trouble, having four players with three fouls. However, the Broncos managed to hang on to the lead entering intermission at 41-37.

THE THIRD PERIOD belonged to Wheeling's Dan "Sammy" Larson as he played havoc with the Barrington guards. He came up with several steals and scored 10 points, four of them coming on technical free throws. Ike Person left the game with four fouls, leaving Wheeling's Scott Mulford free to entertain the crowd with a sweeping hook that got down to give the Wildcats a 48-45 lead. The lead snowballed to 57-49 before Barrington regrouped and got six points back to enter the final stanza trailing 57-55.

The Wildcats played ball control to open the fourth period but could not get the shots down. Person re-entered the game and contributed a bucket and four free throws, but for the most part both teams remained cold.

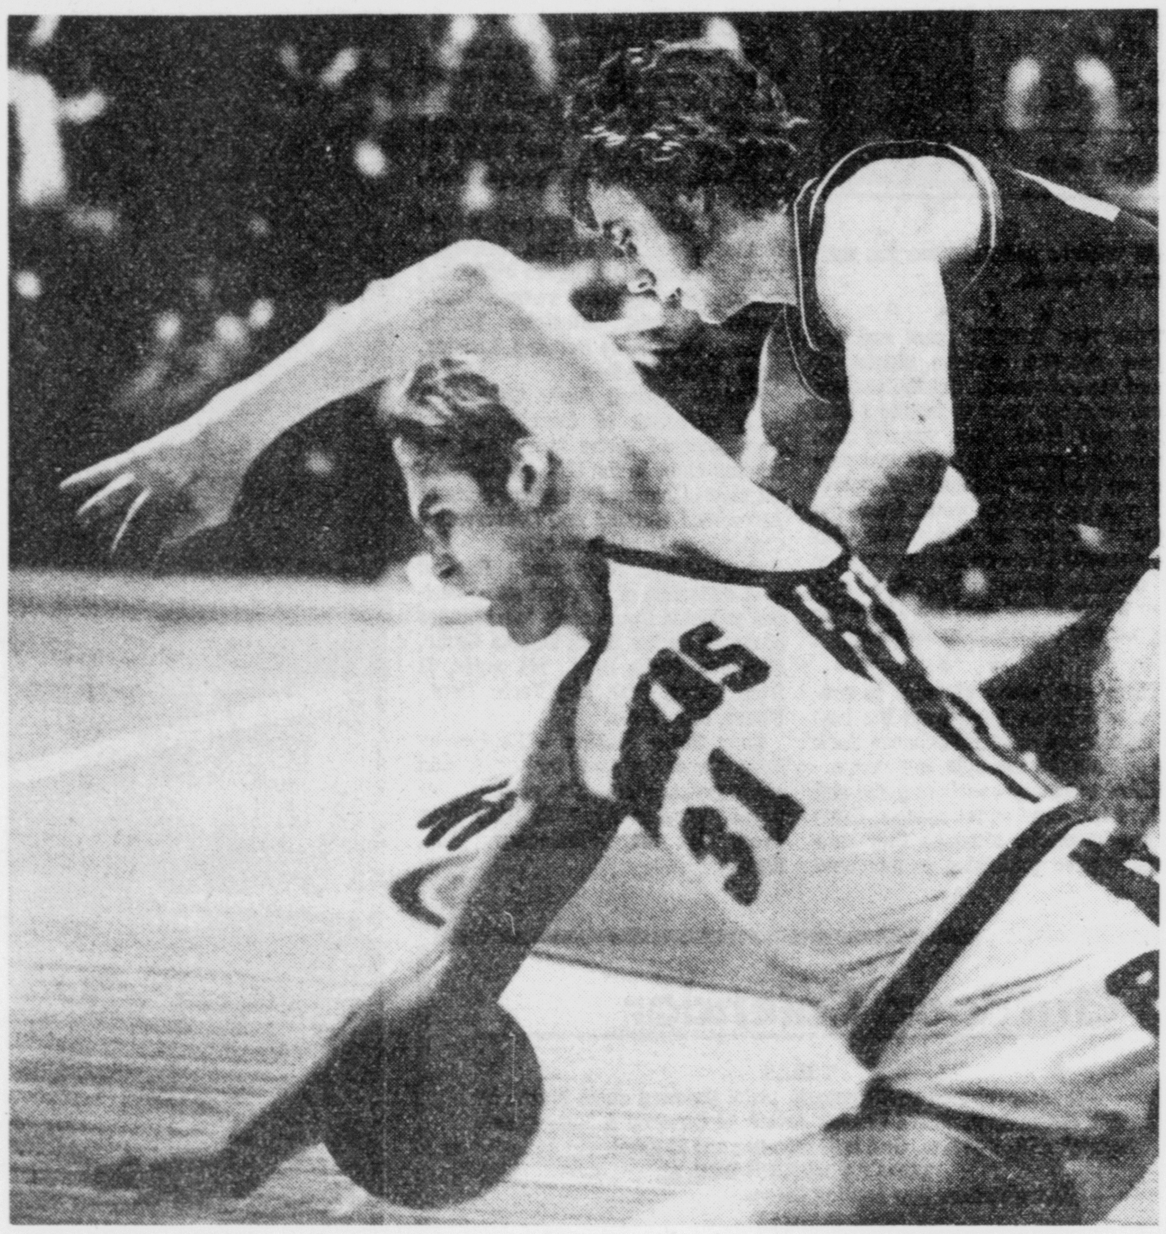
Mark Meyer connected from the twilight zone for Barrington to tie it at 63-63, but the pesky Larson got through for a layup to make it 65-63 with 1:01 left. Henricksen tied it at 65-65 then won the game as time ran out on a free throw, 66-65.

"WE DID NOT adjust to the officiating tonight," Gary Cook said. "We were not prepared to face such tight officiating. Wheeling played very well tonight and they played Person well. They sagged on him all night.

Wheeling coach Ted Ecker was optimistic coming into the game, insisting that, "We came over here with the idea we could beat them, maybe not tonight but a few weeks from now. We played a real fine game.

"Dan Larson is a great competitor and he's going to get better cause he is hampered by a sore leg right now. The teams around the league are going to have to deal with Larson."

The teams around the MSL are going to have a very tough time dealing with the Wildcats and for the Broncos, well they are proven champions, but now performing in a perhaps tougher environment.



LOOSE BALL BATTLE between Barrington's Bill Hugo and Dan Larson of Wheeling drags both to the floor during dramatic action Friday night. Barrington captured a heart-throbbing 66-65 triumph on Bruce Henricksen's free throw with no time remaining.

Hoffman Estates honored tonight at Arlington Park

As part of the festivities marking harness racing's debut in the northern suburbs for the first time in Illinois history, Arlington Park Race Track will salute the Village of Hoffman Estates tonight.

Discount coupons entitling residents of Hoffman Estates to seats in the grandstand at $1 (regular price, $1.85) for Dec. 3 only are available at stores throughout the village as well as at the Chamber of Commerce.

"Hoffman Estates Night" will be listed in the track program and a race will be named in honor of the village.

Mayor Virginia Hayter will be in attendance for the evening, and will participate in picture-taking ceremonies with a winning jockey.

Hersey frosh cage meet has 8 teams

Eight high schools will compete in the Hersey freshman basketball tournament, which begins Tuesday and Wednesday. The other dates for the tourney are Dec. 12 and 14.

The freshman teams entered are Barrington, Deerfield, Elk Grove, Maine South, Schaumburg, Prospect, Mundelein and the hosting Huskies.

Gary Huff hurting—but hopeful

by BOB GALLAS

TAMPA, Fla. — Former Bears quarterback Gary Huff, a mild-mannered man who spends his off-seasons working as an accountant, thought his career would finally begin adding up when he was traded to the Buccaneers this year after a season of doing no more than holding placekicks in Chicago.

He was back home, playing in the same city where he went to high school and college, where he had bought a home for his family in 1975. The Bucs had traded for him ,and he was the No. 1 quarterback.

Come Sunday Huff will be on the other side of the field when the Bears meet the Bucs, but may wonder if he was in the right palce at the right time.

IT SEEMS THINGS haven't changed that much after all.

Rookie Randy Hedberg is expected to start at quarterback for the Bucs Sunday in place of Huff, who returned to the Starting lineup just last week, after missing four games with cracked ribs. Huff couldn't put any points on the scoreboard as the Bucs were shut out by Atlanta. He probably can't help but wonder what he's doing in the NFL when Hedberg, who has completed just 28 per cent of his passes and has led the offense to zero points in three games, replaces him.

"It's just been an unlucky year for me with injuries and timing," said Huff. "But I still love it here. I think it's going to be great.Huff's first setback came soon after he arrived here. Mike Boryla unexpectedly became a free agent when the Philadelphia Eagles neglected to send the quarterback a letter, informing him he was entering his option year. The omission made Boryla an instant free agent and he was signed by Tampa Bay. Huff then had competition for a job that was supposedly his for the asking.

BUT BORYLA went down for the year with a knee injury in a preseason game. The next week Huff completed 15 of 23 passes for 237 yards and for three long touchdowns in three quarters before suffering the same knee injury Boryla sustained a week earlier.

But the decision was made not to operate on Huff.

"At least I've proven I can heal fast," Huff said. "They told me I'd be out six weeks minimum and I was back in four."

Huff returned to guide his team through a 23-7 loss to Dallas, not a bad showing. The following week he didn't start but came in for much of the game, a 10-0 loss to Washington. The next week, things started to look up.

DESPITE THE KNEE brace that limits his mobility, Huff led the offense to a team record 23 points against Seattle. But for the only time this season, the defense let the Bucs down, allowing 30 points as the Bucs lost again. Huff completed 18 of 32 passes for 217 yards and a touchdown, the only touchdown pass Tampa has scored all year. Things were looking up.

But the following week against Green Bay, Huff suffered cracked ribs and missed the next four games, before returning last week.

Huff knows what it is to be booed from his days with the Bears. He also knows what it's like to lose, also courtesy of the Bears.

"I can remember with the Bears we'd go three or four games without scoring a touchdown and the fans would boo Bobby Douglass."

IT'S BEEN A bizarre romance between Huff and his hometown fans. When he went down in the Green Bay game, the crowd cheered.

"I still don't know why," he said. "I already had completed nine passes in that game.

"You have to remember we haven't scored a touchdown at home yet. "When you play bad football, the fans don't always boo. But when you can't score in five games . . . "

Huff said he would like to play against his former teammates, but if he doesn't, it's not the end of the world.

"WE HAVE TO use every edge. Maybe coach (John McKay) will think, 'Gary knows Chicago, so they'll change up, do different things against him.' I know their (Bears') weaknesses and strengths but that works both ways. They know mine."

His memories of Chicago are bittersweet. He speaks highly of Bear coach Jack Pardee and calls wide receiver James Scott one of the fastest and most underrated players in football. But he also remembers other times.

"Jack (Pardee) is so defensive-minded. "He was constantly saying just don't run the ball over," Huff said. "I remember going to him and asking why I wasn't starting. He took out his book and said, 'Gee, Gary, you're throwing too many interceptions in practice (this week).'

"I said, 'Jack, I have only thrown two. Are you counting the ones vs. the defense? (Huff would run the opposition's plays against the first string Bears defense). Zeke (Bratkowski, former Bear quarterback coach) always told me just to throw it up there to give the defense some work and not worry about interceptions.

"THE NEXT WEEK I went out in practice and threw one interception.

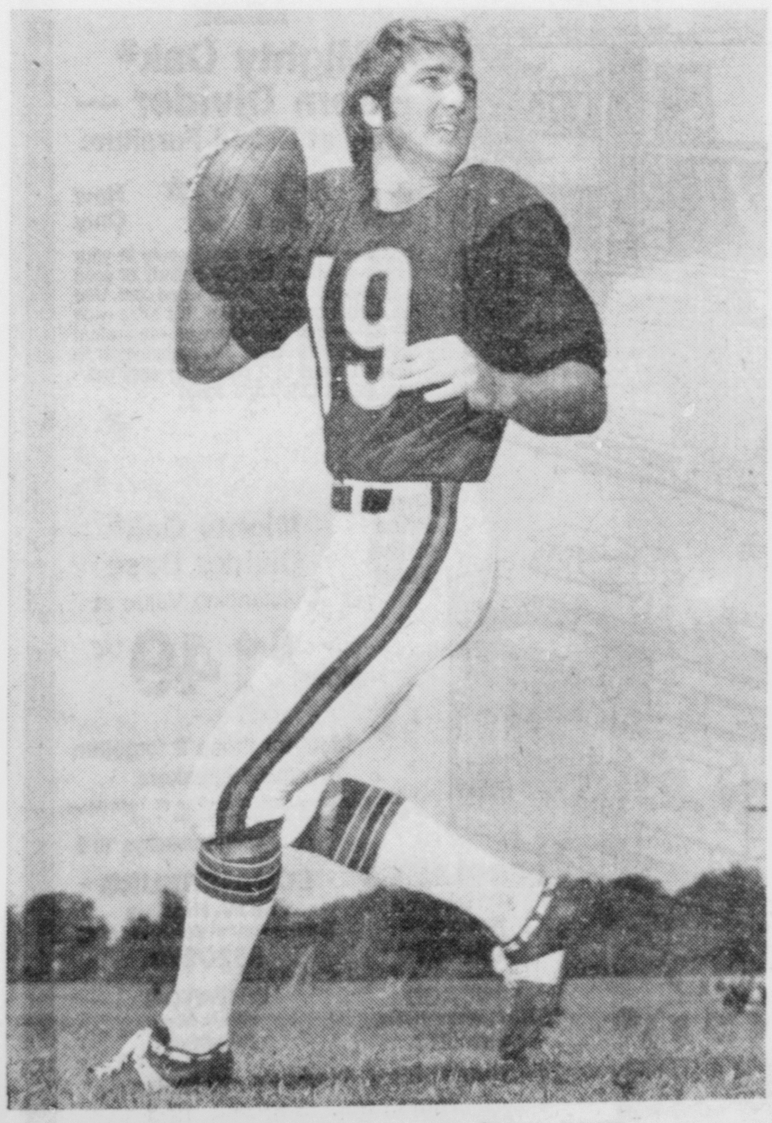
"But he (Pardee) is a good man and a good coach. I learned a lot from him."

Huff has shown signs of shaking the injuries that have plagued him. Last week, McKay said Huff moved much better against the Falcons. It was the first game since the preseason that Huff did not have to wear the knee brace and protective rib guard.

The decision to start Hedberg, whose statistics are bad partially due to the fact that the Bucs are usually behind and the opposition knows he's going to pass, was made because he's looked good in practice this week, McKay said.

"We've got some fine ability here and the nucleus to win a few games," Huff said.

But he doesn't know if he'll be part of it.



Tampa Bay Buccaneer Gary Huff

Pressure on Bears to win in Tampa

covered from a cold and was running at full strength in practice Friday, but fullback Robin Earl (bruised shoulders) and wide receiver and punt returner Steve Schubert (pulled thigh muscle) may not be able to play much because of their injuries.

The Bucs' biggest injury involves nose guard Dave Pear, who went into the hospital for back traction after last Sunday's loss but is expected to play Sunday. Pear is a major factor in the Bucs' three-man line on defense.

"WE EXPECT HIM (Pear) to be in there all the time," Pardee said Friday. "He's as good a noseman as we've faced all year. And if you can't attack the noseman, you can't attack the voids (gaps) very well either.

"Their secondary is tough too," he said. "They hit well and hard. They tackle like linebackers in the Doug Plank, Gary Fencik mold."

Pardee is hoping the Bears, who have been down in Tampa since Tuesday night, won't play like previous Bear teams — that left early to practice near their Sunday playing site.

No Bear team in recent memory has won a game when it spent the week in the opponent's city. The 1963 world champion Bears traveled like that only once, to San Francisco, and lost. It was their only loss that year.

"I WISH WE had had better weather but considering the weather back home, we couldn't have gotten much done there," Pardee said. Temperatures have been in the 70s and 80s here all week but twice, including Friday, the Bears had to practice in the rain.

"We've had three good workouts here though," said Pardee, who said he was pleased with the idea of arriving in Tampa early.

Running back and kick returner Anthony Davis probably won't play for the Bucs Sunday because of an injury so George Ragsdale, a running back who has been filling in at wide receiver, will return kicks and has moved back to the tailback spot to fill in for Davis.

THE BUCS have made punter Dave Green their kicker this week as regular Allan Leavitt went on injured reserve. Larry Swider, who led the nation in punting while at the University of Pittsburgh in 1976, has been signed.

The Bucs will be rebounding from their worst offensive effort ever, gaining just 78 yards (62 rushing, 16 passing) in a 17-0 defeat to the Falcons.

While Huff won't start, he is expected to see action before the game is over, unless Hedberg is dazzling.

The Tampa team rushing mark recently went over the 1,000-yard mark. Walter Payton alone has rushed for more than 1,500 yards for the Bears.

WHAT TO WATCH:

- Center Dan Peiffer and guards Noah Jackson and Revie Sorey vs. noseguard Dave Pear, one of the best in the NFL.
- Bear receivers vs. hard-hitting Bucs' secondary which has only allowed an average of 132 yards passing per game this year and but nine touchdowns via the air.
- Walter Payton vs. Bucs' 3-4 defense, which has allowed just 10 touchdowns rushing and is ranked eighth in the NFC. Also, Payton vs. the Selmon Brothers, inside linebacker Dewey and right defensive end Lee Roy.

A little preparation and venison's fine

Jim Cook

Outdoor editor

More than ever before, hunters in Illinois have venison in their freezers as the result of a record harvest of 12,637 deer during the first three days of the split shotgun season.

The pictures have been taken and the heads sent out for mounting, but nobody dares to touch the deer meat. The fear of tough, stringy, gamey-tasting venison is enough to discourage most novices who would just as soon allow the deer to contract freezer burn.

Properly prepared venison has a singular flavor and a unique texture that should be a compliment instead of an insult to the cook.

THE INITIAL steps to a satisfying meal begin in the field, immediately after the kill. The deer should be quickly and correctly dressed. A delay here could change a feast into a failure, no matter what magic the cook possesses.

The old wive's tale that all meat has to be processed in an antiseptic plant and neatly packaged in transparent film is obviously untrue. The belief may be a derivative of the hamburger and hot dog society in which we live.

As most experienced hunters know, just the opposite is true. Game birds such as grouse and pheasant can make chicken seem bland and tastelss. The same is true of venison. Steaks, roasts, sausage or even hamburger processed from deer meat are a delicious alternative from the beef syndrome.

One of the major differences is that wild game does not have the fat of domestic fowl or animals. A barnyard goose does not have the flavor of a Canada honker that has been shot in southern Illinois after a flight from Horicon Marsh, Wis.

FOLLOWING ARE recipes which I wholeheartedly endorse.

My favorite for the candlelight occasion — Mix 2 cups red wine, juice of 1 lime and 2 lemons, 2 bay leaves (crushed), 2 cloves (bruised), 1 clove garlic (mashed), 2 stalks celery (chopped), 6 slices onion, 6 slices carrot, 6 peppercorns, 1 pinch thyme, ½ teaspoon salt.

Soak a 3-pound piece of lean venison in this brew for about an hour. Then remove and cut the meat into one-inch cubes. Fry in butter until brown. Finally set the meat aflame with 2 tablespoon gin and keep hot.

In another pan, brown 3 tablespoons of pork, cubed small. Add this to the venison. Strain the marinade mix and pour enough of it over the meat to moisten.

ADD 1 CUP mushroom buttons to the meat mix, 1 cup small white onions that have been parboiled and tenderized. Cover the pan tightly and simmer for 30 minutes.

In still another pan, fry 6 chicken livers quickly in a little fat and add these to the meat-mushrooms-onion mix. Serve hot and garnish with small pieces of bread that have been fried in butter.

To prepare a rolled venison roast that serves up to 6 people, use a four-pound piece of venison — either the rump cut or the top of round rolled and tied. Roast should be at least four pounds since venison shrinks during cooking. Salt and pepper.

Place the meat in a conventional roasting pan but do not cover or add water. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Roast in oven, 300 degrees Fahrenheit (low temperature retards shrinkage), frequently basting with liquid shortening. Finish basting with juices accumulating from roast. Allow 32-35 minutes cooking time for each pound of venison.

FOR THE STRICT meat and potatoes appetite, venison steaks or chops are the answer. Cut the venison steak or chops about ¾ inch to 1 inch thick and treat them exactly like prime beef steaks. Rub salt and pepper into the steak and dust with flour.

Fry in hot fat until brown. Place the steak in a roaster and cover with mushrooms. Sizzle on top of stove for 20 minutes. Remove the steak and pour 2 cups of red wine into the roasting pan and thicken to make gravy.

There are dozens of ways to prepare wild game. Sometimes it's best to experiment or to interchange duck for squirrel, for example, in a recipe.

There are many excellent game and fish recipe books on the market. Some of my favorites, although they may have stopped publishing or increased prices, are listed below. They make exceptional Christmas gifts.

Remington Wild Game Cookbook — contains over 500 completely tested recipes for cooking all types of game as well as for related sauces and stuffings. 160 pages. Send $2.95 to Cookbook, Box 432, Bridgeport, Conn. 06602.

Game Recipes — compact 8-page booklet compiled by the Michigan Dept. of Natural Resources containing recipes from beaver to venison. Write Game Recipes, Michigan Tourist Council, Commerce Building, Lansing, Mich., 48913. It's free.

Wildlife Harvest Game Cook Book — A collection of favorite recipes from licensed game farms and fee hunting clubs in the U.S. and Canada. 151 pages. Inquire for current price at Arrowhead Hunting and Conservation Club, Goose Lake, Iowa 52750.

Cooking The Sportsman's Harvest — A collection of fish and game recipes collected from people in a number of states by the South Dakota Game, Fish and Parks Dept., 144 pages, $2 from Game, Fish and Parks Dept., Pierre, S.D., 57501.

Easy Game Cooking — Recipes by Joan Cone designed for quick and easy preparation, 124 recipes, 140 pages, spiral-bound. $3.95 from Joan Cone, Box 242, Williamsburg, Va., 23185.

DEERLY DELICIOUS. Venison stew or casserole is a refreshing departure from beef or pork, provided it is prepared properly. Venison cubed and garnished with vegetables and spices can be both tender and tasty.

Record stock of chinook planned

The recent acquisition of two million chinook salmon eggs from Michigan signals an attempt this next year by the Illinois Dept. of Conservation to stock a record one million-plus chinook in Lake Michigan.

Some 300,000 of the newly fertilized chinook eggs were brought from the Manistee River Fish Hatchery in Michigan to the Dept. of Conservation's Spring Grove Hatchery to be "eyed." Another half million eggs soon will be brought to the Spring Grove Hatchery for rearing, said Nils Anderson of the Spring Grove staff.

The rest of the eggs will mature at Peterson Trout Farms, a private hatchery in Peterson, Minn. "Eyeing" occurs when the eye of the embryonic fish develops in the egg prior to any other maturation.

THE ACQUISITION of more eggs was possible, Anderson said, because three Illinois Dept. of Conservation fishery staff persons were dispatched to the Manistee River Hatchery to help the Michigan staff in fertilizing and packing the eggs.

"There's no problem in getting the eggs. It's getting the facilities to raise them that has held us back," Anderson said.

Additional outdoor raceways will enable the Spring Grove Hatchery to surpass the 200,000 chinook it raised last year, Anderson said.

A half million of the 700,000 eggs raised at the Illinois hatchery should survive and grow into stockable fish, he said. As many as another million fish could survive the Peterson Trout Farms for stocking in Lake Michigan.

The largest previous chinook stocking in Illinois waters was 757,826 in 1974. This year 346,696 chinook were stocked after attempts to get more chinook through a private hatchery in Washington were stymied.

Ski season here to stay

Ski conditions around the midwest are already something to get excited about. Many resorts have opened ahead of schedule to accommodate the early snowfall.

In Illinois, Villa Olivia in Bartlett has a 5-10 inch base and will be making snow throughout the weekend. Holiday Park in Ingleside has an 8-12 inch base with two new inches of natural snow and are calling their conditions good to very good.

In Wisconsin, Tyrol Basin has a 10-20 inch base, is making snow, has five runs open and skiing is good. Cascade opens today on a limited basis with only intermediate and beginner runs operating. They are making snow and skiing is fair.

SKYLINE OPENS today with a 3-6 inch base. Two chair lifts will be operating and the bunny hill will be open. Skiing is fair to good. Timberline opens today with a 4-6 inch base, and fair conditions. The T-bar and rope tow will be available.

Wintergreen opens today, but skiers are asked to call 608-588-2571 before leaving, to check conditions. One run and the beginner area are open. Devil's Head has two slopes open with a 6-8 inch base and skiing is rated as good.

Editor's note . . .

This issue is filled with, what does that kid call them . . . 'specialers.' Begin with Travel and a special section devoted to cruises. Continue on to a story about some very special people — those irresistible youngsters who win your heart and sell you products at the same time.

Another special is the spread on the winners of the Leisure Photography Contest. There were 900 entries in this, our first photography contest, and the six you'll find pictured are the best of the lot.

The books section is also special this week. We've devoted it to children's books and, with the help of twelve young people from our area, have reviewed what we consider to be some very good titles. Before finishing your Christmas list, look it over.

One last special — and it's a biggie if you are a crossword puzzle fanatic as is yours truly. A regular feature beginning today in Leisure is the prestigious New York Times Magazine Crossword Puzzle. This is no minor league puzzle. This one can rarely be handled in a day and generally drives the worker mad right up to the following week when the solution is printed. A word to the wise . . . the title over the puzzle is the clue to many answers.

The world's largest and most expensive luxury liner is Cunard's Queen Elizabeth II, known affectionately as QE2.

Life aboard the world's most luxurious luxury liner

by Melvin Maddocks

A photograph taken just a little more than a decade ago shows five ships tied up at New York's "Luxury Liner Row": The Queen Elizabeth, the France, the Constitution, the United States, and the Raffaello. All are gone now to one ignominous form of "retirement" or another.

Over land, over sea one now glances impatiently at one's watch, pops a salted nut or two, carves a precooked steak, and voila! one has traveled from interchangeable airport to interchangeable airport, late 20th-century style.

The luxury liner, which replaced the sailing packet a century ago as the railroad replaced the stagecoach, has, in turn, become the victim of further technological evolution.

Today the history of the transatlantic passenger liner is being perpetuated by the wake of but one ship, the Queen Elizabeth 2.

The Queen Elizabeth 2 was built in 1968, far too late for illusions. 1957 was the year of the Great Divide: As many passengers crossed the Atlantic by air as by sea, and after that the swing to the plane was swift and, for the luxury liner, nearly terminal. A Cunard manifesto defined the margins left to its last seafarer: "The new QE2 will not merely ferry passengers glamorously back and forth across the Atlantic. Instead she will operate as a self-contained sea-going resort."

In effect, the QE2 must answer the rough question: "Why would I rather be here — on this 1,000-foot bit of floating real estate — rather than at such destinations as London or New York or Paris?"

Shuffleboard will not do as an answer, though it is part of the answer. For the law of the luxury liner is that something one would take for granted on land assumes a heightened value at sea. QE2 passengers spend hours playing "deck tennis" — i.e., throwing a ring across a net. Jogging, or simply walking, becomes a kind of physical privilege. A lecture on backgammon turns into an event. Men have been known to attend seminars on the art of makeup. To switch on one's cabin radio and hear the sea-going equivalent of Muzak seems a small miracle.

Then there is eating, a normal habit which, on shipboard, somehow becomes a full-time occupation. On the QE2 the lip-smacking passenger has a wake-up hot cup in his cabin. Then comes breakfast. Fruits, from melons to figs. Mountains of porridge. Two kinds of pancakes. Two kinds of bacon. Eggs in every conceivable style — after which the poor starved fellow can hardly wait for his morning bouillon at 11. How did he ever survive without it in his landlubber days?

The hard-gulping traveler no sooner drops his elevenses napkin than it's time for lunch. More soups — plus salads, fish, fowl, meat, and endless desserts. In short, something far more like dinner. Or so it would seem until you face a dinner. But wait. First, naturally, there is afternoon tea, sweetened and lengthened out by dance music from one of the two orchestras stocked by the QE2.

Besides taking advantage of the sea-enhanced routines of daily living, the QE2 relies heavily on a "you-sailed-with-a-celebrity" policy. On a recent crossing the singer and dancer Rita Moreno was the "star" attraction in the various QE2 clubrooms, while, rather like a floating Chautauqua, the Nobel economist Milton Friedman, the composer and music critic Virgil Thomson, and Betty Friedan provided passengers with a series of improving daytime lectures.

The luxury liner has one other cunning resource against ship-boredom. Old luxury-liner hands used to have a saying: Every ship has three sides — port, starboard, and social. On each crossing of the QE2 a small highly structured community is deliberately created for a brief but intriguing interval. In fact, the luxury liner may be one of the last places on earth — or sea — where classes, temporarily constituted, can still feel a bracing sense of feudal rivalry.

On a plane "first-class" and "tourist" are distinctions so abstract as to be almost meaningless. On a ship, "first-class" and "tourist" form ancient lines, full of delicious invidiousness. "First-class" still sniffs with a marvelous snobbishness of Right Families; "tourist" however modified, derives its heritage from The Great Unwashed — the immigrant in steerage. Robert Louis Stevenson, a romantic slummer like all writers, once traveled in steerage so that he could write a George Orwell-type book, "The Amateur Immigrant." As late as the 1929s when the author Ludwig Bemelmans wished to gather material by the same ruse, a French purser rebuked him thus: "Ah Monsieur, Victor Hugo did not become a hunchback to write 'Notre Dame.' "

In addition to stratified dining rooms, the QE2 has separate swimming pools, laundromats, and libraries for first-class and tourist. The two classes are allowed to coexist at movies. (When "talkies" first came out, only the first-class passenger could view them on certain liners; the tourist class was condemned to "silents.")

In 1977, if the first-class traveler can no longer quite believe himself a "temporary member of royalty" — the promise of earlier liners to gullible Americans — he can at least feel like the member of a particularly exclusive country club. On the other hand, the tourist-class traveler will see himself as a lively Bohemian, having a lot more fun than those stuffy snobs in evening dress and black tie.

So the passengers polarize into Dowager Duchesses and Happy Peasants — how the concertinas are playing tonight! Nobody should underestimate the pleasures of shipboard class-warfare, which the QE2 further sharpens and refines by offering "suites" and "Penthouse Rooms" for the first-class-of-the-first-class. Only the children, sneaking back and forth across the lines, know the truth their parents hate to hear: There's not that much difference.

And how could it be otherwise? The QE2 was launched with the same gold scissors that cut the launching cord on the earlier Queen Elizabeth and Queen Mary. But into what a changed world!

The QE2 does not, like the old French liners, contain enough gilt and mirrors for the palace at Versailles. She does not, like the old Italian liners, feature painted ceilings with puckered cherubs, nor, like the old German liners, resemble a stage setting out of Wagner. She is equally removed from earlier Cunarders. The mahogany paneling and marble that make English ships such as the Mauretania seem like floating St. James clubs have been replaced by plastic and aluminum. The QE2 is a decent compromise — halfway between Ruritania and a four-star motel.

What, in 1977, is the "case" for ship-travel?

There remains finally the abiding presence of the sea — life's most terrifying and consoling rhythm. The seavoyager has not just pushed another instant button. He earns his departure and his arrival, wave by wave. He bears witness to his transit. He learns the meaning of the word "voyage." There is really quite a lot to be said for travel that makes one register the experience itself rather than just the jet-lag.

Standing at port in Nassau. Cruise lines offer a variety of ports of call in their itineraries.

Booming cruise industry almost depression proof

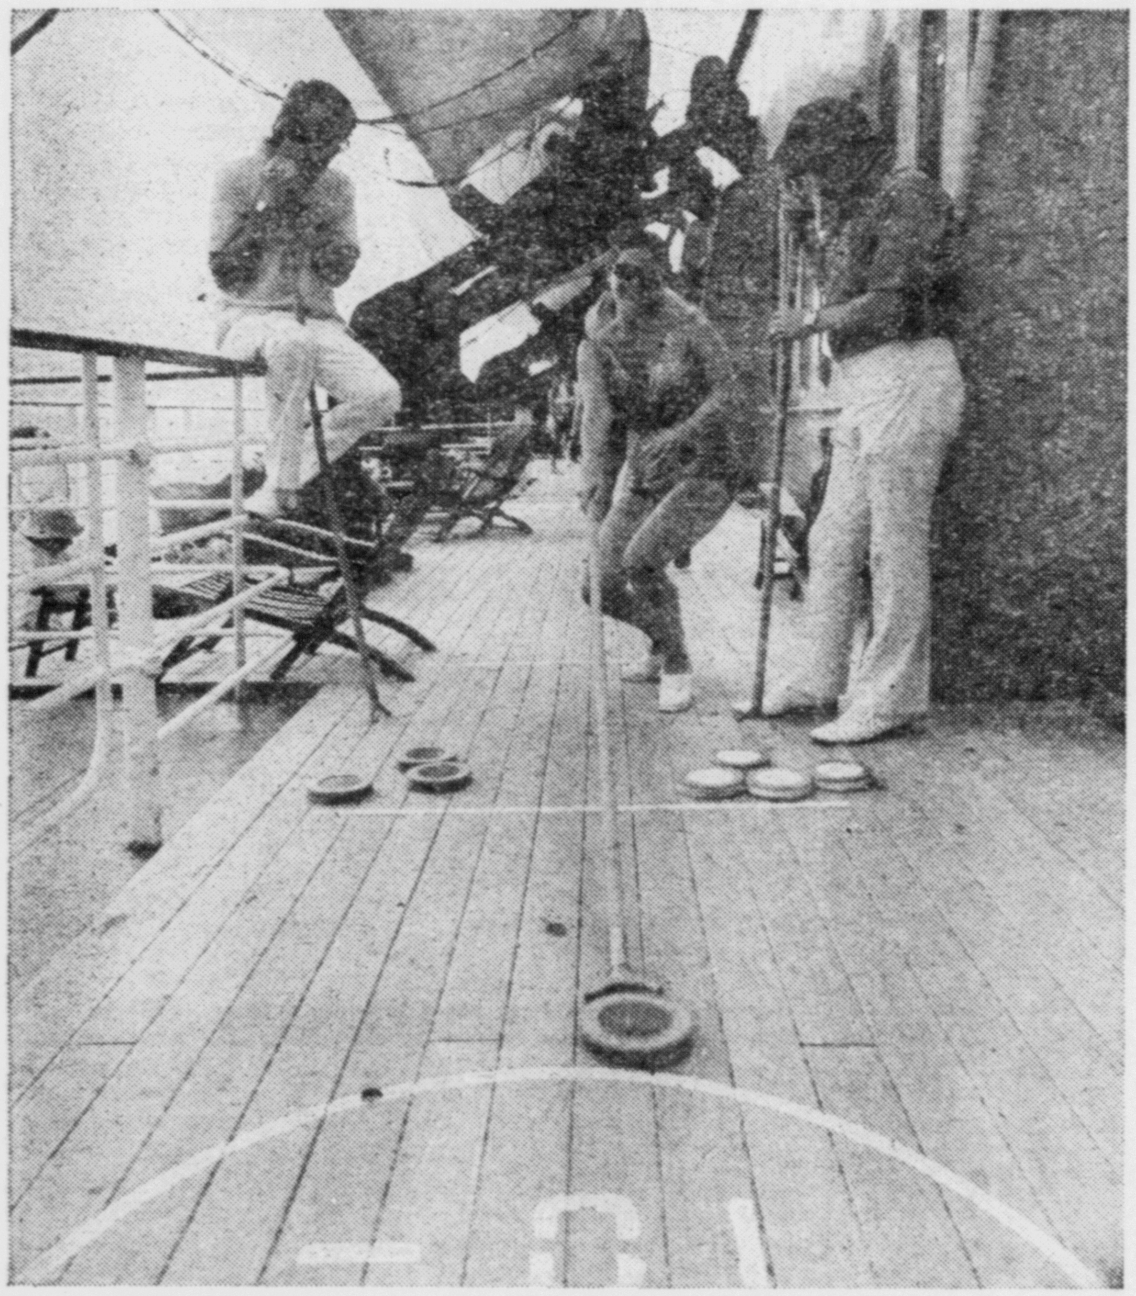
by Peter Tonge

Barbara Gilbert sells vacations — any and every kind. But selling a cruise, she says, gives her more "personal satisfaction" than any other aspect of the business.

An ardent cruise taker herself, her enthusiasm for the fun, relaxation, and educational opportunities a cruise can provide animates her discussions with every client.

"Selling cruises isn't difficult," she insists, her own particular talents not withstanding. Indeed it isn't. The simple truth is that more and more people go cruising every year and so far there is no letup in sight.

Cruisetakers out of North American ports topped one million for the first time in 1975 (the peak of the recession), says Norman Brown of Cruise Lines International, an association of twenty-four lines operating out of United States ports. There was a 10 per cent increase last year and all indications are that there will be another 10 per cent jump by the time figures are tallied at the end of this year. As he sees it the cruise industry is "almost depression-proof."



Shuffleboard is an old standby in deck games on pleasure cruises.

But why such popularity? The age-old lure of the sea remains strong in much of the human race, apparently, and the golden age of the passenger liner still is recent enough in human memory to lure people to the cruise ships in an attempt to recapture some of the romance of those days. Then there are the other pluses:

You board the ship and unpack once, says Mrs. Gilbert. Thereafter you move from island to island or country to country without ever leaving your "home away from home." Compare this with going from airport to airport (with packing and unpacking) if you wanted the same trip by air. By air, too, she points out, "you would be limited to one suitcase. You can bring a trunk full of clothes aboard ship."

Once aboard, you can adopt as easy or hectic a pace as you wish — relax in a deck-chair with a book, go swimming, take in a movie, a dance lesson maybe, or perhaps some lessons in conversational Italian or whatever. At night there are cabarets and the like. And, remember, all of these options are included in the original price.

Oscar Kolb, a spokesman for the Holland America Line, says similar things, adding: "The ship is a place to go in itself. It is a floating resort which takes you to other resorts as well. You can do as much or as little as you want to, and you don't need a cab when you take in a theater — it's just a short walk down the hall."

Because of all this, repeat business is high. "You either take one cruise and never go again or you come back as often as you can," says Mr. Brown. "If they have the money they repeat," says Mrs. Gilbert. "On one of our recent cruises 80 per cent of the passenger complement was made up of repeaters," says Mr. Kolb. Indeed, throughout the industry spokesmen say the same thing: it is the repeaters that make this such a stable business to be in.

All this speaks well for cruising. On the other hand, there are likely to be some let-downs for the first-time cruiser if he thinks all cruise ships are the epitome of luxury. Some are likened by the critics to "floating motels." "The Travel Advisor" of Bronxville, New York, a monthly bulletin of travel advice, says that some of these "motels" have been "taken over by managements who have scrapped cuisine and service for the bottom line."

On the other hand the Advisor's editors find that "the cruise line industry ranks among the most honest segment of the entire travel industry." Overbooking, a not infrequent airline and hotel technique to cover for no shows, is virtually unknown in the cruise business. Occasionally, however, some cruise lines have been guilty of bait-and-switch techniques — the tactic of luring a client in with bargain rates for a closet-sized cabin and then attempting to sell more commodious — and more expensive — accommodation.

To overcome such flaws, search for a cruise through a travel agent that specializes in cruising. Ask the agent how frequently he (or she) goes cruising. The good ones will take cruises often and if they have not actually cruised on a ship they will have visited it or had a trusted colleague do so. A good agent does more than look at the swimming pools, the floor shows, and the deck space but at the beds, the bathrooms, and the air conditioning as well.

Says Mrs. Gilbert, "There are some ships that I won't ever put a client on." A good agent also knows how to match up people with the cruise. What delights one person may bore another to tears. "A few questions quickly put you on the right track," says Mrs. Gilbert.

Meanwhile, the trend in the cruise industry is for ever greater variety. There are cruises now that will take you whale-watching off the Southern California coast or penguin counting down in Antarctica; those that sail up the Mississippi or down the Nile. There are cruises that specialize in symphony concerts and others in nothing but ear-splitting rock. Often both are available on the same ship, suitably separated, of course. Some cruises are formal, dress-up-for-dinner affairs; on others even the captain may come to dinner in a turtle neck.

There are three-day, minicruises and round-the-world varieties that take three months. While some ships are small, little larger than yachts, the Queen Elizabeth 2 has eight decks and fourteen elevators.

So, the choice is wide and the choice is yours. Shop around, savor the thought a little, then go ahead and enjoy the vacation. If you are like the majority, you will enjoy the experience enough to go back again — and again.

Luxury should not be only criteria for choosing a cruise

by Jeanne and Harry Harman

Cruise lines woo prospective passengers with promises of luxury fit for the Aga Khan.

Incredible edibles, always a minimum of four full servings plus any number of supplementary snacks every twenty-four hours, the variety of entertainment found in any good-sized city, spotless and spacious quarters, child care, enough betterment and enrichment programs to choke the most avid culture-bent individual, complete facilities for sports, both obvious and exotic — all these insure there just aren't enough hours in the day to participate in everything.

So what's the bottom line on this plethora of goodies? Cut away all the embellishment and one important sentence remains: X number of ports in Y days in Z countries or islands.

Solve this equation and you will have the answers to two important questions: How much you will spend (multiply $60 times days afloat by the number in your party; this figure approximates total cruise costs, including tips), and how interesting the harbors you drop the hook in might be (a fairly reliable rule of thumb: the closer to U.S. borders the less interesting, the more commonplace and crowded). An additional point: one week (or shorter) junkets can not provide the degree of luxury that longer sailings do.

Costs, of course, vary widely; from a low of around $30 per day per person — unrealistic unless you cut your nautical molars in steerage — up to tens of thousands of dollars for better around the world accommodations on outstanding barques for couples. You can sometimes beat the $60 a day fee by snagging a minimum-priced cell during the very low season. But such finds are rare.

Shipping companies are getting better about the price spread: it used to be that the best quarters (not suites) were four times the cost of the rentable broom closets, always the first space booked. Now deluxe quarters usually cost twice or three times as much as the cheaper berths. But don't forget, whether your ticket sells for the most or the least, you get basically the same amenities except for cabin area and location.

One week circuits out of stateside bases hit close to home Bermudian, Bahaman, West Indian, Mexican, and Canadian outposts; okay, if that's where you want to go and much better than the two- or 3-day expeditions to "no-where" or the Nassau-Freeport sea buses. But these routes are considered a bit prosaic by many experienced travelers.

Add a few days or originate your holiday in San Juan, the French West Indies, or Curacao, and you'll make it to the bottom of the Antilles, northern South America, or some fetching Latin American hideaways. Don't, above all else, buy a three month, around-the-world voyage until you've sampled two or three shorter — much shorter — itineraries.

Some few people just don't enjoy life afloat, hard as that is to believe. Don't forget the Ocean Traveler's First Law: ships shrink at sea — sometimes alarmingly. We can remember once when half the company of 400 on a round-the-worlder jumped ship in Buenos Aires and flew home rather than spend another 10 days sailing to New York.

If you had only a single standard to judge various brigantines by, it would have to be whether one or two sittings prevail in the dining department. Most extended routings offer single-shift munching — short hauls just the opposite. We suggest it's close to impossible to meet a strict time schedule for meals, or risk missing a course or two, and still feel 100 per cent pampered.

Your decision here also bears on the actual victuals. We know of very few vessels that turn out the quality of food associated with prep schools or summer camps. However, galleys serving a single sitting invariably present more lavish menus, and provide a wider variety of offerings.

Bear in mind, too, that the time factor on mini-cruises (one week and under) almost always guarantees quick shuffle stops just long enough for a fairly fast spin around city hall. La Citadelle outside Cap Haitien and some of the Greek islands are noteworthy exceptions.

But very few quick trips really afford opportunity to visit national shrines, or the leisure to better understand and appreciate the people of a country, the frequently lovely countryside, and stimulating smaller population centers.

So what is the verdict? For us, for sheer grand and glorious traveling, nothing beats a three-week sojourn at sea, being coddled and cuddled by experienced, deft service personnel, fed by inspired chefs, amused by minstrels kings couldn't buy — well, that's the dream. Maybe it will come true once again.

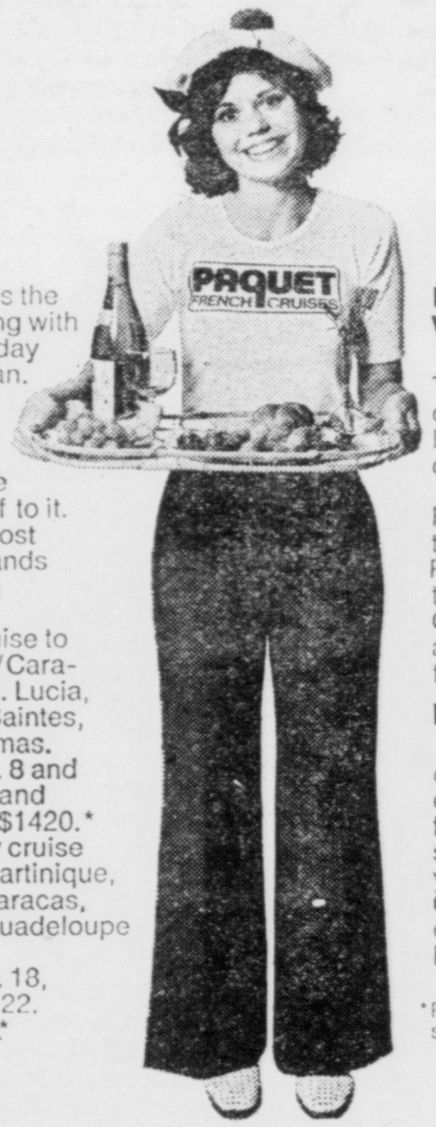
The Caribbean island cruises of the year are M.S. Mermoz gourmet cruises.



M.S. Mermoz takes the rushing out of cruising with the only 10- and 11-day cruises from San Juan.

Upbeat and Offbeat Islands

You'll sail from the Caribbean instead of to it. And you'll enjoy a most unusual blend of islands plus a dash of South America.

Take a 10-day cruise to Curacao, La Guaira/Caracas, Guadeloupe, St. Lucia, Dominica, Iles des Saintes, Antigua and St. Thomas. Sailing Dec. 18, Jan. 8 and 29, Feb. 19, Mar. 12 and Apr. 2. From $690 to $1420.*

Or take an 11-day cruise to St. Barthelemy, Martinique, Aruba, La Guaira/Caracas, Tobago, Barbados, Guadeloupe and St. Croix. Sailing Dec. 28, Jan. 18, Feb. 8, March 1 and 22. From $760 to $1560.*

Paquet Rhymes With Gourmet

The cuisine is French. The wines are free. And all of your dinners will be as leisurely as only one sitting can be.

Three of them will be Paquet Gourmet Salutes to the cuisine of Burgundy, Périgord and Provence. And three of them will be gala Captain's dinners—each with a different festive theme—in the intimate Café de la Paix.

Fly and Cruise Savings

A Paquet gourmet cruise costs no more than an ordinary cruise. And you'll fly scheduled airlines at substantial savings. Consult your Travel Agent or Paquet Cruises Inc., 1370 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Registered in France.

More than a million went to sea on a cruise in '76

by Murray J. Brown

Tired of telephones, television and traffic?

Well, you could seek refuse in a cave. Or you could take a cruise.

Last year, in fact, more than one million Americans responded to the call of the sea and sailed off on one of the more than seventy cruise ships competing for the North American trade and set a record.

Even confirmed landlubbers would have to agree there are few better ways of escaping from the daily rat race than a leisurely voyage aboard a cruise ship with all the amenities of home and more.

And each year U.S. and foreign-flag shipping companies offer hundreds of cruises and itineraries for vacationists seeking relaxation, as well as those in search of fun in the sun and the adventure of visiting exotic faraway places with strange sounding names.

Listings range from one-port three-day cruises from a low of about $154 to three-month voyages with two dozen ports for up to $160,000.

Itineraries from East, West, Gulf and Caribbean ports include the West Indies and the Mediterranean, Bermuda and the Bahamas, Mexico and Alaska, South America and Africa, the Middle East and the Far East, the South Pacific and Hawaii, among others.

This year five ships will take cruise passengers from the United States to China and offer a choice of Canton, Kweilin, Peking and Shanghai for tours ranging from three to eight days.

The Sagafjord departing Port Everglades, Fla., Jan. 7 (from $7,700 to $15,300) and the Kungsholm sailing from New York Jan. 21 (from $8,360 to $15,730) will sail up the Pearl River to Whampoa, the port for Canton, for three-day visits.

Docking in Hong Kong will be the Queen Elizabeth 2 which leaves New York Jan. 16. The following day, Jan. 17, the Rotterdam departs also from New York ($18,105 to $23,865) with a call at Hong Kong.

The Royal Viking Sea, sailing from Los Angeles on Feb. 8 ($8,400 to $19,320) will make a three-day call at Shanghai, which has been closed to non-communist shipping for years.

For those with less time and money, there are a wide range of shorter and more moderately priced sailings to choose from.

During the current fall-winter season six popular ships offer Caribbean cruises from New York, ranging from seven to 19 days. They include the Oceanic, Doric, Statendam, Kungsholm, Rotterdam and QE2.

Seven cruise ships will operate regularly from Port Everglades, including the Vistafjord on 14 to 17-day multiport sailings and the Leonardo da Vinci three- and four-day cruises to Nassau.

A total of sixteen ships will be based in Miami, offering cruises ranging up to 14 days and more, including three- and four-day sailings by the Sunward II to the Bahama Out Islands.

Three ships will sail out of New Orleans, including the Soviet flagships Odessa and Kazakhstan on one-week to 14-day cruises of the Caribbean. The Stella Solaris will offer 7-day to 16-day cruises out of Galveston.

Passengers departing from San Juan, Puerto Rico, will have a choice of ten ships offering a variety of itineraries, including 14-day trans-Panama Canal cruises from Los Angeles by the Island Princess. Cruise ships also will sail from other Caribbean islands and from Acapulco, Mexico.

About a dozen cruise ships will operate out of Los Angeles and San Francisco on voyages to Mexico and the West Indies, South America, Hawaii and the South Pacific, ranging from three to 68 days.

Gaining in popularity are air-sea packages — with passengers flying to and from the port of embarkation and disembarkation. Some shipping companies subsidize all or part of the air fare and also provide transfers between the airport and pier.

There are some advantages in vacationing by ship. You don't have to wonder about where to eat and sleep. The ship is your mobile home. And you have a pretty good idea of what a vacation at sea will cost, even before you board your ship. The rate you pay for your stateroom includes not only accommodations but meals, entertainment and transportation at sea. Not included are personal expenses such as bar bills, laundry, shopping, tipping, etc. Shore excursions also are extra unless specifically included in the contract.

The bottom line in selecting a cruise is how much time and money you can spend. Other factors could include the nationality of the ship and crew and the type of cuisine. Some cruise vacationists prefer southern European and Latin crews. Italians and Greeks, for instance, are considered outgoing and fun-loving. Northern European and Asians are rated more reserved and more efficient.

Prices generally are lowest just before Christmas, late spring and early summer. Cruises during Christmas, New Year and Easter are the most expensive. Seasonal variations between the lowest and highest rates can range from 35 to 50 per cent.

Outside staterooms on the upper decks are usually the most luxurious — and the highest priced. Generally, the lower the deck, the lower the price. Incidentally, the few minimum-priced rooms are the first to be booked by veteran cruise vacationists.

At any rate, ask to see the deck plans before deciding. Staterooms and cabins amidships and on the lower decks usually have less motion, but most cruise ships are equipped with stabilizers for rough seas. Make sure, however, that your room is not too close to the nightclub or the engine room where noise could be a problem.

At night, there usually is dancing and entertainment — the bigger the ship, the better the entertainment, usually. There also are special events, such as masquerades, crew talent shows and the Captain's cocktail parties and dinners. Sometimes there are bingo games and horse races and some ships have slot machines or gaming rooms with blackjack and roulette games.

For your next vacation try a Caribbean cruise

by Annette Bartle

Each Caribbean island has its own style, its own special delight. If choosing one for your next vacation seems impossible, there's a way to postpone the decision and at the same time scout out a location for a subsequent trip : Take a cruise.

A recent seven-day voyage on the S/S Monarch Sun took me to four Caribbean ports. Two of these, San Juan and St. Thomas, are popular tourist playgrounds. Contrasting with them were lesser known Cap Haitien on the northern side of Haiti, and quiet Puerto Plata in the north of the Dominican Republic.

Its 617 feet (weight 23,500 tons) gives the Monarch Sun plenty of room for 650 passengers in its nine decks. It boasts a swimming pool, a theater, shops, tastefully furnished lounges, plus lots of open space. Meals offer considerable variety, and the nightly midnight buffet is a delicious extravagance.

You can board the Sun in Miami any Sunday afternoon all year long. Monday morning you wake to a sea without end. Deck chairs, strategically placed in private nooks and crannies as high as 170 feet above the waves, let you be all alone with the ocean and sky, if you wish.

A myriad of activities is available: Exercise classes and bridge lessons, ping-pong tournaments and SCRABBLE contests are just a few. A musical group plays almost all day. At night there is dancing in several lounges, as well as floor shows. Parties abound, the highlight of the voyage being the one given by the ship's captain. At all times, a social staff of five is ready to entertain you, answer questions, introduce you to whomever you wish to meet.

An interesting talk by shore excursions manager, David Aiken, familiarizes you with all ports of call ahead of time. You can join David's thoughtfully planned tours on each island. He will also give you good advice if you want to explore on your own.

The Sun enters her first port, Cap Haitien, Tuesday morning. Le Cap is Haiti's most historic town. It was the domain of "mad emperor" Henri Christophe, who ruled the island from 1806 until 1820, when he shot himself, reputedly with a solid gold bullet he fashioned for that purpose.

The verdant mountains are topped with ruins of huge fortresses and castles Henri Christophe built. La Citadelle, dubbed "the Colossus of the Caribbean," can be reached only on horseback. An early morning departure is necessary. Closer to port is Henri's 20-acre Sans Souci palace, where you walk through huge roofless chambers under skeletal arches of stone. Once decorated in velvet and gold, they are now adorned with delicate trumpet vines where colorful birds nest.

The sound of Spanish is in the air as you dock in Old San Juan on Wednesday. Cobblestone streets, lined with restored colonial houses, lead to Puerto Rico's pride, 16th-century El Morro Castle, 150 feet above the sea.

The beach area, a short drive away, offers high-rise hotels with luxurious accommodations. Lavish floor shows are nightly features. You can sample them, since your ship stays in port until 2 a.m.

On Thursday you enter the horseshoe-shaped harbor of St. Thomas in the U.S. Virgin Islands, just as the waters turns pink, a dazzling mirror for a rising sun. It is a sight worth getting up for.

The quaint town of Charlotte Amalie is filled with duty-free shops, but leave yourself enough time for a drive over the mountains. In 15 minutes you'll reach Magen's Bay Point. It commands a magnificent view of the sea and mountains.

A pastoral scene greets you on friday on the shores of the Dominican Republic, where high mountains are a backdrop for cattle grazing in green pastures. You can walk for miles on deserted, windswept beaches. Here and there the lively waters form calm bays. You'll find little restaurants and picnic grounds. The friendly Spanish-speaking natives all know some English, and delight in helping visitors. "Come back again," they will say to you, as they lead you to the docks to wave your ship good-bye.

Actually, after all this splendor, it may be harder than ever to decide which island appeals to you most for your next vacation. In fact, you may just decide to take another cruise.

Don't be a 'no show'

With all-time records expected in air travel during the upcoming holiday season, airlines are concerned about "no-shows."

. A "no-show" is someone who makes a reservation on a particular flight, does not show up for the flight, and does not notify the airline of his or her change of plans. The problem is especially severe during holiday peak travel periods. Thousands of people each day make reservations and then do not show up to occupy confirmed space. People don't realize that unless they cancel unused reservations, they could be depriving someone else of a seat.

The airline industry long has had problems with passengers who do not show up for their flight because they have either changed their plans, or have made multiple bookings on various flights because they are uncertain of their time of departure.

Airlines do not know until the flight is ready to depart that the "no-show" passenger will fail to occupy a seat. By that time it is often too late to re-sell the seat to someone else. The airline loses revenue, and someone who might have been told earlier that the flight was full is deprived of making the trip.

Multiple bookings during holiday periods can reach extreme proportions on some routes. Airlines sometimes experience up to forty to fifty empty seats or no-shows on flights that were booked solid several days before departure.

The fate of the last U.S. cruise line now in jeopardy

by Peter Tonge

Unless something is done, and soon, the last of the U.S. flag passenger liners will be taken out of service within a few months, leaving the cruise routes of the world to the British, Dutch, Norwegian, and other maritime nations.

The ships in question are the SS Mariposa and the SS Monterey, direct descendants of the once proud line of "white ships" that sailed from California to Hawaii and on through the South Seas to Australia and New Zealand.

Both belong to the San Francisco-based Pacific Far East Line and are considered by those who have sailed in them to match the best in the cruise-ship industry. But both have to be subsidized to stay competitive, and nothing short of an act of Congress will extend the subsidies, which automatically cease early next year.

The Merchant Marine Act of 1936, under which government subsidies can be paid to keep a vessel operating, specifies that the economic life of a vessel is 25 years. That statutory life ends for the Mariposa with the ship's return from its South Seas cruise departing Dec. 7; for the Monterey the end comes when it returns from its four-island Hawaii cruise, departing March 20 next year.

But both ships have been operating passenger liners for only 20 years, and the Pacific Far East Line hopes that Congress might amend the act so that the statutory economic life concludes with 25 years of passenger service. Many concerned cruise lovers are writing their representatives, urging them to support a five-year extension of the subsidy.

Many ships in the cruise business today are converted passenger liners that are a good deal older than the Mariposa and Monterey. Moreover, extensive renovations in recent years have placed the two ships on a par with any for comfort and service. Says Gerald L. Studley of Connecticut, a former marine engineer and a veteran of many cruise vacations; "They equal the Royal Viking Line, ships which in my estimation are the Cadillacs of the business."

The Pacific Shipper, news magazine of the maritime industry, calculates that removing the two U.S. vessels from service would eliminate 1,000 jobs and remove an annual $20 million payroll from the economy. Some $1.6 million in foreign commerce would also be lost, and the $20 million in passenger fares would go to lines of other nationalities. On the other hand government subsidies to keep the two ships competitive run to $17.5 million a year.

But more than just economic losses would occur from the withdrawal of the two ships. There is a value to U.S. prestige every time a ship of quality shows up in a foreign port. Says Rep. John M. Murphy (D) of New York, chairman of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, concerned over the "demise" of the U.S.-flag passenger fleet: "The Russians currently have fifty-one passenger vessels operating in all parts of the world. In addition to maintaining the capability for troop movement with these ships in time of emergency, they are also taking our travel dollars and parading their flag everywhere."

Here are some helpful tips for Americans considering taking a cruise for the first time:

• Tip dining and cabin stewards or stewardesses $1.50 per day per person — a little more on the shorter cruises and a little less on the longer — and about half of that to the busboy. Figure about $5 a week for the maitre d' if he is extra helpful, and $3 for the wine steward and the deck steward for their services. Tip bar men and drink waiters as you would at home, between 15 and 25 per cent of the tab. And don't pay any attention to the "no tipping" signs at the New York shipping terminal — tip longshoremen at least 50 cents per bag. Incidentally, Holland America abolished tipping on its cruise ships several years ago and includes a service charge in the rate, but passengers are known to still tip.

• Board the ship as early as possible, find the maitre d' and select your table and sitting in the dining room. On larger ships, there usually are two sittings for lunch and dinner — breakfast is "open," meaning you can sit anywhere, and on some ships will be served in the stateroom.

If you are a member of the early-to-rise, early-to-bed set, take the first sitting. The second sitting generally is about 90 minutes later and usually preferred by the "happy hour" and night owls in the crowd. There usually are separate entertainment, shows, movies, etc., for the early and late groups.

After you get squared away in the dining room, look for the chief deck steward and choose the location of your deck chair. Some companies charge for the chairs, other do not.

• If you are planning to give yourself a bon voyage party, don't forget to bring along the champagne and other libations. Under U.S. law bars must remain closed and sales of whiskey, etc., are forbidden until the ship is outside U.S. territorial waters. Your steward will provide glasses, ice, setups and canapes if the company has been notified in advance.

Mattress Factory

THOUGHTS on a MATTRESS

For almost five years our little mattress factory has been doing an ever increasing business by attracting the astute, intelligent customer with the experience to recognize the difference between some so-called "discount" or "sale" price and a top quality product at a low price.

And we would like to emphasize one point — this is a FACTORY — not a "Factory Outlet" or "Factory Closeout Mart" or some other rip-off of just another retail store. We actually make our mattresses and box springs right here before your very eyes.

Our mattresses and box springs are made with top quality materials and specifications that have been proven over many years. Our prices are based on the cost of the materials that go into each product that we make. And we know that when you compare quality for quality, our prices are very, very low.

I guess that is why so many customers who have shopped all the so-called "sale" priced mattresses in the area come back and buy ours.

Weekends for holiday mood

It is now officially December and time to start counting the days until Christmas. If you haven't caught the holiday spirit yet perhaps a weekend jaunt to some festive occasion will put you in the mood.

Galena, Ill. will be decked out for the holidays this weekend and next weekend for two annual events: the Christmas Walk and the Candlelight Tours.

The Christmas Walk is this weekend and is sponsored by the Galena Antique Dealers Assn. and members of the Artist's Guild. Visitors will stroll through festively decorated shops and studios along winding Main Street and in cozy residential locations. At the Hospitality Center, located at the Old Market House State Memorial on Commerce Street, homemade Christmas refreshments will be served. Maps to shops and studios are available at the center and all participating establishments will display a numbered red star in a window or doorway. Hours for the Christmas walk this weekend are until 7 p.m. tonight and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. tomorrow.

Next weekend are the annual Candlelight Tours of Galena's historic homes. Tours have been scheduled from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Weekend

Dec. 10 and 11 and will include the Grant Home, Belvedere House, Eagle's Nest, Orrin Smith Home, Turney House and the Galena Depot. Tour tickets are available from twenty local businesses and prices are $5.50 for adults and $3.50 for children age 12 and under. Tickets are also available at tour locations.

The Market House State Memorial will again serve as a hospitality and information center and free refreshments will be served. Sleigh rides will be offered along the Galena riverfront from 10 a.m. to dusk on both days next weekend and carolling will be heard from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

A Christmas Ball is planned for 8 p.m. Dec. 10 and tickets are $3 for adults, $2.50 for senior citizens and $1 for spectators in the gallery. Participants are encouraged to wear period dress. Tickets are available from the door and from local business establishments.

In Peoria, Ill. a Candlelight Christmas will be held this weekend and next weekend at the Pettengill-Morron House at 1212 W. Moss Ave. The 11-room mansion, home of the Peoria Historical Society, will be illuminated by candlelight as groups of costumed interpreters re-enact family Christmas preparations from the Victorian period. Special musical presentations will be given to highlight the Christmas spirit. Admission to the home is $1.50 for adults and 25 cents for children. Hours are 7 to 9 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays and 6 to 9 p.m. on Sundays.

Decorations made from nature's raw materials — peach pits, corn husks and milkweed pods — will adorn the houses, craft shops, schoolhouse and meetinghouse at Hale Farm and Village in Bath, Ohio until the end of the month. The theme of this year's Christmas celebration is "A Doll's Christmas" and displays of dolls will be located throughout the farm and village.

Special programs planned this year at the village are: caroling on the village grounds tomorrow afternoon; a presentation of Christmas music from the 19th century on Dec. 11; and a yule log ceremony at 5 p.m. on Dec. 18. Hours at Hale Farm and Village are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesdays through Saturdays and noon to 5 p.m. on Sundays. Admission is $2.50 adults and $1 for students.

Greenfield Village in Dearborn, Mich. is celebrating a nostalgic Christmas. All the period buildings in the village are decorated for the holidays. There will be sleigh rides, carolers and lots of Christmas goodies right up until the holidays.

Special holiday events are also planned:

• This weekend in New Salem near Springfield, Ill. Baking, butter churning and sewing preparations will be demonstrated in this reconstructed 1830s prairie village.

• In Rockford, Ill. where "Wassail Day" today and tomorrow will be observed with sleigh rides, madrigal singing and refreshments from 1 to 5 p.m. at the Rockford Museum Center.

• Next weekend in Charleston, Ill. at the Moore Home Historic Site. A "Civil War Christmas" gives visitors a chance to join in the decorating preparations of an early 1800s Christmas. Goose dinner, cooked on a wood-burning stove, will be served on Sunday evening.

Posh penthouses being built on Queen Liz II

Two posh, split-level penthouse suites, now being constructed aboard the luxury liner, Queen Elizabeth 2, will be the most deluxe — and expensive — passenger accommodations on any ship in the world.

The three-room apartments will sell for $160,000 each on the three-month Pacific Cruise that leaves New York on Jan. 16. Costing about a million dollars to build, the apartments can be adapted to meet any desired bedroom and sitting room configuration. Each apartment will have two bedrooms, including a large split-level bedroom/sitting room, two bathrooms, outdoor private patios, walk-in wardrobes and closets, refrigerators, bars, large amounts of dresser and storage space and luxurious American and European furniture. They will be named the Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth Suites after the two famous Cunard transatlantic liners. They will be situated on the signal deck, the highest level of the QE 2, immediately forward of the well-known Queen Anne and Trafalgar Suites.

The largest passenger liner in the world, the 66,851-ton Queen Elizabeth 2, is 963 feet long, 105 feet wide and draws 32-feet, 6-inches of water. Before the addition of the new rooms she had 861 passenger cabins.

Ship scheduled for trans-Panama Canal cruise

The first sailing of the T.S.S. Mardi Gras from the West Coast will take place during a series of trans-canal voyages and a Mexican Riviera Cruise between April 16 and May 28, 1978.

The Mardi Gras will interrupt its regular weekly Miami-Caribbean cruise schedule when it departs on a 17-day trans-Panama canal Cruise April 16. During its voyage to the Caribbean, South America, the Panama Canal, Mexico and the Pacific the ship will visit St. Thomas, St. Maarten, LaGuaira (Caracas), Curacao, Balboa and Acapulco before arriving in Los Angeles May 3. The Mardi Gras will depart Los Angeles on May 4 for an eight-day cruise of the Mexican Riviera including stops at Manzanillo and Mazatlan.

On May 11 the Mardi Gras will sail from Los Angeles on a 17-day trans-canal cruise visiting Acapulco, the Canal ports of Balboa and Cristobal, Curacao, LaGuaira, St. Maarten and St. Thomas before arriving in Miami May 28.

The trans-Panama Canal cruises start at $1,295 per person. The Mexican Riviera Cruise is priced from $445. For further information contact Carnival Cruise Lines, 820 Biscayne Blvd., Miami, Fla. 33132 (800) 327-7373.

Fly/cruise plan on Delta and Norwegian line

The "Cloud Nine" series of Fly/Cruise vacations has been assembled by Norwegian Caribbean Lines and Delta Air Lines for the enjoyment of vacation travelers this season.

Three one-week cruises aboard the M/S Starward, the M/S Southward, or the M/S Skyward, and a choice of a three or four-day cruise aboard Norwegian Caribbean Lines' new M/S Sunward II offer a variety of ports of call, itineraries, prices and a choice in length of stay.

Activities while at sea range from swimming, skeet shooting (with expert instructors on board) to top-notch entertainment in the many clubs and lounges on board during the evening hours. Entertainers are rotated from ship to ship assuring new acts on a daily basis. Gourmet cuisine has been a hallmark of ocean cruising, and all Norwegian Caribbean Lines' vessels offer a variety of choices among American, Continental, and West Indian fare.

Each fly/cruise program starts with a special check-in service at the Delta city of origin. Cruise line personnel meet vacationers' flights on arrival at Miami International expediting baggage claim and transfer from airport to dockside where baggage may be checked directly to passenger cabins (a gratuity of 25¢ per bag is customary). Passengers are then hosted to a pre-cruise luncheon in the Cloud 9 room at nearby Miami Marina before embarkation commences at 1:30 p.m.

Prices from Chicago for these seven-day cruise programs range from a low of $575 to a high of $1,210 per person including air fare, transfers, shipboard accommodations, all meals, and port taxes, subject to date of departure and double occupancy in cruise cabins.

CANCER DETECTION
HEART ATTACK PREVENTION

A resting electrocardiogram is taken at the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. to detect any heart abnormalities.

Of every six people who get cancer today, two will be saved and four will die. Of the four who would otherwise die, one might be saved with earlier diagnosis and prompt treatment. (According to American Cancer Society publication '76 Cancer Facts and Figures.)

The health examination services available at the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection include all cancer detection procedures recommended by the American Cancer Society, Illinois Division.

Heart Disease accounts for nearly half of all deaths each year. Unlike most Cancer, Heart Attack can be postponed through reducing one's risk factors such as diet, exercise, blood pressure, smoking, etc. Dr. Morris Collen, a well-known specialist in preventive medicine, was quoted in the January, 1977 Issue of FORTUNE "if one has a checkup every year or two at age thirty-five and thereafter, directed at postponable diseases, the mortality rate from those diseases after seven years is approximately 50 percent of what it would have been without exams."

The Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. offers a preventive health screening examination designed for three purposes:

1. To establish a health profile for each individual to be used as a baseline for future care.
2. To analyze an individual's risk factors for heart disease and cancer and statistically forecast probable life expectancy and suggest ways it might actually be increased by reducing the risk factors found.
3. Screen for treatable disease. Early detection and prompt treatment increase the probability of a favorable outcome.

This meticulous 3 hour, low cost examination includes a computerized medical history, physical examination, proctosigmoidoscopy, chest x-ray, electrocardiogram, blood pressure, over 30 chemical determinations on blood and urine, vision, audiometry, spirometry, glaucoma test, body measurements. Women also receive a pap smear and instruction in breast self-examination. Exercise stress test, 24 hour holter monitor, and echocardiography are available as options.

Give yourself the best protection available today against cancer and heart disease by calling your physician or the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. located at 1000 Grand Canyon Parkway, Hoffman Estates, Illinois (Near Woodfield Mall.) Master Charge accepted. Telephone (312) 885-1360.

Gary Coleman juggles school, family, friends and work to be the spokeskid for Harris Bank.

by Diane Mermigas

His cheeks puff into a smile, his eyes widen with excitement and in a roller-coaster inflection he declares, "You ought to have a Hubert doll!"

Cute kids can sell anything and when nine-year-old Gary Coleman opens his mouth, adults automatically feel the urge to squeeze him tight and gush forth with an, "Oh, isn't he just darling." An irresistable moppet like that simply has the world wrapped around his finger.

It goes from "Annie" on Broadway to Mikey at the breakfast table deciding in favor of Life cereal on a television commercial.

They warm the heart in a rash of new family television serials this season and sell everything from bank services to toothpaste to captured audiences who just can't resist the bubbly giggling of a child.

There is big money and notoriety in modeling, advertising, television series, stage and film roles for children.

The demands of kiddie show biz mean youngsters have to juggle school, family and friends along with a work schedule that is often more frustrating and trying than it is glamorous.

But the trials and tribulations of the business aside, nothing can be more rewarding or gratifying for an outgoing, expressive youngster who loves to entertain and charm, or for the parents who cherish every chance to be proud, or for advertisers and program producers who are anxious for new ways to secure an audience.

It's fun and games most of the time, and a business like any other all of the time.

The biggest price Gary Coleman must pay for fame and fortune at the ripe old age of nine is being recognized in public places and asked to say that wonderfully expressive line from the Harris Bank commercial over and over and over again.

"I'm so used to that. That's why I say that line so perfect," Gary says with an accenting nod of his little head, waving a plastic cup of milk through the air in one hand and grasping a partially eaten cookie in the other.

Chicago's latest phenomenon is fidgety when he talks, shifting his small body from one side of the chair to the other, rubbing his hands on his knees and staring upwards in thought only to burst open with the kind of conversation that involves all of him. The printed word can barely do this little fellow justice.

There are times when Gary and his parents are visiting his agent downtown, or he is fulfilling his role as spokeskid for the Harris Bank at a Loop function when grown-ups will spot him, figure out who he is and badger him with questions.

"I don't mind it, but I have to talk for hours just to keep these people entertained," Gary sighed. "It's a lot of work."

Gary is really in love with his work, even though he enthusiastically waits for the right moment to dramatically proclaim, "It's a nightmare. I have work to do and after school I come home tired and weary, dropping and falling flat on my back," he says, shaking his head from side to side in rhythm with every new word. Then, Gary cracks up in one of those rolling giggles when his father interjects with, "I thought you liked to work?"

"Not this one time when we were making that Winnie the Pooh commercial outside in the rain," Gary fires back in a more serious tone. "It was wet. It was blah. It was sloppy and muggy. That's one time I won't forget," he says, resorting again to dramatics.

Ah, the challenge of working on a rainy day! But, it seems as though it would take more than that to get Gary Coleman down. He is truly a child in love with life, people and his work.

It was his tenacity that got him where he is today, among the 500, of an estimated 1,500 children registered with Chicago modeling agencies, who work regularly. It is his parents, Willie and Sue Coleman, however, who keep him humble.

His father, an inspector of incoming goods for Abbott Laboratories in North Chicago and his mother, a former nurse, work hard to maintain a normal home life for their only son in his native Zion.

He attends a public elementary school in Zion and spends some of the money he makes developing an elaborate set of trains in the basement of their family home. The majority of the money Gary makes from modeling and acting is placed by his parents into a special bank account for his future education.

"I just love trains, even more than acting. I have two HO trains that are medium size, one battery, one wood, a miniature, motor shops, a gas station, and then I got . . . Gee, I could go on forever like this," says Gary, snapping his fingers in a whole new burst of energy — the kind that often makes his parents weary.

Gary is the exception rather than the rule when it comes to kid biz.

He got things rolling on his own. "I just wrote a letter to Montgomery Ward's when I was five or so telling them that I'd like to be in their fashion shows which had all girls in them. The only men they had were grown-ups with lots of muscles who dressed fine. I just wanted to do it," Gary explained.

"Well, one thing led to another," as Gary would say. Ward's recommended to Gary's parents that they get him an agent. In the four years since then, he's done countless commercials for sponsors like Betty Crocker, Hallmark, McDonald's, Bisquick, Cracker Jack, Sears and Kellogg's. "I've done so many things, I just lost track of them all," said the man of the world.

Gary's mother recently took him to Los Angeles to tape a General Foods commercial when Gary was spotted by Norman Lear talent scouts. It was suggested that he test for a few of Lear's newly developed comedy projects while on the West Coast.

"We were in the process of doing that when Norman Lear walked into the office. Gary recognized him right away and insisted that he be allowed to follow him to take a picture of him," Mrs. Coleman said.

Well, by the time Gary had cornered Lear in his own office and filled his head with all that wonderful carrying-on, Lear and Gary had exchanged photographs and Lear had signed his new young companion to come back to Hollywood for some regular work.

"He probably figured that any child who had enough nerve to just walk right in on Norman Lear was really something else," She said.

Gary is the only child in an all-children cast, who is not from Los Angeles or New York, to appear in one of Lear's new pilot shows, a remake of the "Little Rascals." If the show can be syndicated and do well in the ratings, Gary will have a regular West Coast job for a while.

Because he's his own best press agent and because he can talk his way into just about anything he really wants, Gary Coleman is a one of a kind child thespian.

Even more stunning is the fact that Gary, who is small for his age, was born with a defective bladder which resulted in a kidney transplant at the age of five and that has required special exercises and regular check-ups ever since.

But, Gary has always been an expressive, bright child who was talking at eight months and reading by the age of three and a half.

"My wife and I feel the good Lord took something from him, but he gave him something special in return. He just wants to make others enjoy. From the time he was born, his eyes have always been just so crystal clear and wide open — wondering and laughing and talking," said Gary's father.

"Gary has never been the kind of child you could talk down to. He's always been inquisitive and never been satisfied with the answer you give him. He always gives his own opinion and wants people to know how he feels. And we've always encouraged that," said mom.

Gary and countless other successful child stars have that wholesome, all-American, Huckleberry Finn type quality of a real life kid that agents, advertisers and television programmers are after these days.

In the fifties, you could barely bet on anyone allowing a mere child to be the spokesman for their product. Then in the sixties, advertisers were suddenly after the ethnic or the strange looking kids like Mason Reese, who resembled an old man at the age of 10 and started out selling Dunkin' Donut Munchkins and has since graduated to various television roles.

Derek Wells and Sean Marshall star on 'The Fitzpatricks.'

The idea of using kids as irresistible persuaders began back in 1906 when ad agency artist Burr E. Griffin decided to sketch a youngster yawning with a tire in one hand and a lighted candle in the other to personify the slogan "Time to Re-Tire" — a case of innocence representing the infant auto industry.

Jennifer Ann Ursitti models in fashion shows and films television commercials.

Children back then were immortalized on soap boxes and bread wrappers, a pure pre-Raphaelite vision that was a far cry from Norman Rockwell's classic pig-tailed, freckle-faced child who became the staple of child representation some forty years later.

Those were the days when actress Carol Lynley got her start as a successful child model doing commercials for mushroom soup and brassieres.

In the sixties when kids who were real characters, hams and ethnic symbols made the grade. Those were the days of three-year-old Rodney Allen Rippy eating Jack-in-the-Box jumboburgers and sending the sales of the firm's fast food soaring while he grossed some $200,000 in annual income for himself.

Today, advertisers and programers are interested in the Every Kid. The winners in this decade are youngsters like Robbie Rist, who looks like a miniature John Denver with golden locks and round wire rim glasses. Robbie has made it big in McDonald's and American Dairy commercials along with a starring role on the old "Lucas Tanner" series.

They are kids like Adam Rich, another blonde tyke, who plays, Nicholas, the youngest of eight children on ABC's new series, "Eight is Enough," and who had more than thirty commercials and four other television shows to his credit at the age of nine.

Like other of his acting colleagues, Adam enjoys his work, is well adjusted enough to cope with the responsibility, memorizes and interprets his scripted lines easily and is able to put the world of bright lights behind him when he gets home from a long, hard day at the studio.

All child models and actors are limited to a certain number of working hours each day, are required to have a guardian with them at all times while working and are required to have a certain amount of educational instruction daily by either private tutors or in a classroom.

The thousands of children listed with photographs in The Players' Guide, a thick directory of actors and actresses used by casting directors, are well protected by the Screen Actors Guild and their agents.

There are a limited number of agents in the country who are considered to be specialists in child talent and each of them seems to conduct their business based on the same principles and prospects.

The first rule is that you never force a child or his parents into anything. But a talented youngster who is ready and willing to give 150 per cent has a bright and happy future with a good agent who looks out for his or her best interest.

Monica Stuart of New York was recently quoted as saying she relies on the tremendous amount of mail she receives from interested parents as her first source for new talent.

She, like most agents, is mainly on the lookout for children who are small for their age, whose parents can take them to as many interviews and auditions as is necessary, who have stamina, personality and intelligence. Being beautiful isn't the most important thing, these days. It's a plus but not a necessity.

Once an agent has discovered a budding young face, they aren't likely to lose it. Dorothy Day Otis, one of Hollywood's major children's agents, currently has a roster of moppets that are some of the most convincing young salesmen and intense young actors around.

They include seven-year-old Natasha Ryan, a dark-haired, dark-eyed beauty who portrayed the young Sybil in the recent television production of "Sybil," the little girl named Hope in the daytime serial "Days of Our Lives" and the abused child in the recent television drama "Mary Jane Harper Cried Last Night."

Another Dorothy Day Otis star is nine-year-old Quinn Cummings who has starred in a host of feature films and television shows including "Family," who will appear in a future Mary Tyler Moore television special and who is featured in this month's issue of "Seventeen Magazine."

Child models and actors on either of the two elite entertainment coasts have a better chance of graduating from print and television commercials to regular television series and feature films work than do the show biz kids of the Midwest. But, as in Gary Coleman's case, there is always a possibility for bigger and better things.

Shirley Hamilton, president of her own Chicago-based agency which specializes in child models and actors, says the most active years for child stars are between the ages of three and sixteen. The best years for working, because of the demand for youngsters who think older but look younger, is between the ages of six and ten.

She has discovered her "stars" in many different ways. For Betsy Randle Miller, it was a matter of Ms. Hamilton seeing her in a fourth grade school play and realizing the girl's potential. "I was just mesmerized by her and asked the parents to send me some snap shots of her," Ms. Hamilton said.

In the case of Jennifer Ann Ursitti, it was "love" at first sight.

"I had brought my older daughter into Ms. Hamilton's office to see whether or not there was summer modeling work available for her while she was home from school during vacation. The people in the office thought I had brought Jennifer Ann in for an audition. She was only along with us," explained Jennifer Ann's mother.

Adam Rich of 'Eight Is Enough' is an old pro at the tender age of nine.

"Shirley just fell in love with her and felt that she had a lot of potential and signed her exclusively. I feel that it was just being in the right place at the right time, since I never had given any thought to this kind of thing," Mrs. Ursitti said.

Mrs. Ursitti, like other show biz moms, doesn't think of her daughter, the youngest of six, as a Shirley Temple type, "although she does have a cute personality," she admits. "She has a cute way about her."

Cat on a worn wooden porch

Nineteen-year-old Roland Miller, Mount Prospect, a graduate of Forest View High School and photography major at Utah State University took first place honors for color photography with his shot of a deflating hot air balloon. Miller, while in high school, won the Kodak Medallion and the Hallmark Gold Key in a national photography competition. This shot was taken with a 35mm Vivitar SLR.

First place in black and white goes to W. Kristy, 52, of Arlington Heights who has been involved in amateur photography for the past 13 years and is a member of the Ft. Dearborn Chicago Camera Club. Cat on a Worn Wooden Porch was shot with a Leica M3 with a 50 mm lens.

Second place color goes to Sharon Crowley, 32, of Palatine, who made this Picture of Minerva Terrace in Yellowstone National Park on vacation in July. A photographer for two years, Mrs. Crowley shoots with a Konica.

Second place black and white was won by Bobbi Buschbacher, 32, of Arlington Heights who shot the self portrait, Homage to Modigliani, while an art major two years ago at Northeastern Illinois University. Mrs. Buschbacher used an Argus 35 mm SLR and made the picture from a negative sandwich.

Third place in color goes to Marvin F. Schwartz, 49, of Arlington, who has become a "serious" amateur photographer only in the last year or so. Specializing in birds and wildlife, Schwartz shot the Brookfield Zoo lion with a Minolta XE7 with a 400 mm lens and 2X converter.

Third place in black and white was won by Thomas Mahon, 28, of Hoffman Estates, who made the photograph 'Spider' this summer. A member of the Kraft Camera Club, Mahon does his own darkroom work. This picture was shot with a Minolta with a Vivitar zoom lens.

Kids:

Because she's cute and because the timing was right, Jennifer Ann is off to a running start in a world where kids reign supreme. She has just started kindergarten, takes creative drama workshop classes every Saturday morning, is starring as Tinkerbell in a local production of "Peter Pan" and is working in advertisements between times.

Jennifer's work in fashion shows for the locally produced and syndicated "Phil Donahue" show, in television commercials for McDonald's Children's Memorial Hospital and Sears, and in catalog spots has afforded both her parents a lesson about the world of kiddie show business from behind the scenes.

Nearly every stage parent will admit to having encountered at least one instance where they watched as other parents became obsessed with the flashy marketing and competition of their kids.

Most parents admit to being a little hesitant about bringing their children into a experiences along the way, and that they would rather have them give up the work than become caught up in a vicious, race for jobs and money.

"Anytime it ever got close to pushing and shoving, I took my child and just went home. I don't want to get involved in some of these cattle calls that take place, where hundreds of children are asked to wait all day in one room, without proper attention or food, to wait their turn for an interview," one mother said.

"There have been times when the people auditioning have been rude and when some of the parents have seemed cold and competitive. I've seen a lot of that and I back off from it," she said. "But, most of the time, the people involved in this business genuinely understand and care about the children."

Most parents admist to being a little hesitant about bringing their children tino a demanding work schedule at such an early age, but they say they are reassured by the cool nonchalance that most kids have towards the whole business. Most kids are not crushed if they don't land a part in a series or the advertising job they auditioned for. Most of them take success as lightly as they do failure.

Of course, there is big money at stake in this line of work where children manage to dodge the super egos that most show business adults have.

Children under thirteen make an average $35 an hour for printed advertising in newspapers and catalogs, $218 per shooting session for television commercials (the same as adults) and an average $81 per taping session for radio commercials.

A popular dynamo like Gary Coleman could make several thousand dollars from his commercials for the Harris Bank alone.

The stakes are high and the odds are even higher when you consider that maybe only five or six of every 120 children some agencies see every month will ever work actively.

The successful child star typically has lively personality, is well read and sophisticated, can interpret someone else's words to get a message across and has lots of character and energy. Not even beauty can outmatch charisma, agents agree.

Anonymity is usually easy enough to maintain while working, except when a child's schoolmates know and sometimes envy his or her work on television.

"Sometimes you go to school and the kids are jealous of you. Some say they notice me on television and others say I'm a sissy," said Derek Wells who plays R.J. on the CBS show "The Fitzpatricks."

The road to television work has been a little easier for Derek than for most children since his father, Chuck Wells, is a long time character actor.

"But, I don't think it's really been hard to keep friends because of what I do," Derek said. "In fact, I've made a lot of new friends. Me and the other kids on the show eat and study while we wait for our turn to work. I've become good friends with them."

Like ten-year-old Derek, K.C. Martel, nine, has a regular starring role in NBC's new family show "Mulligan Stew." Both youngsters feel they are given sufficient lines and opportunities to exercise their dramatic abilities on camera.

"It's a very exciting thing," says K.C. who's been in the business less than two years. "And if I don't have the chance to do it any more after this, at least I had the chance now."

K.C. still is expected to carry out all his chores at home despite his new station in life — the garbage has to go out, the bed linens have to be changed.

"You don't raise a child to be a movie star any more than you plan all the time he's an infant to make him one. It just happens," said K.C.'s mom. "Some kids do crack under the pressure because it is a rough business. But, most of them work as hard as they can, take it in their stride, look at it as a positive experience and as something that was nice to be a part of."

Derek says he'd be a bus driver, Gary is sure he'd be a train conductor or an architect and Adam would like to be an athlete if one day they outgrow their childhood charm and fade into oblivion.

Parents, agents and children are all well aware that in most cases, child stardom is short lived.

"I like to act because I feel I'm making other people happy. I like to work with my mom, she helps me learn my lines and does all that motherly stuff," said Adam.

"It's not work because I enjoy it," he said.

And the only thing the kids ask for in return seems to be a simple acceptance as individuals and a chance to grow up just like other children and still carry on their trade.

"When I see myself on TV, it's like I'm looking in the mirror. That's just me up there," Gary said. "That's all people see.

"I don't want people making a fuss over me like I'm a picture or a statue in a museum or something. I just want people to accept me as me." §

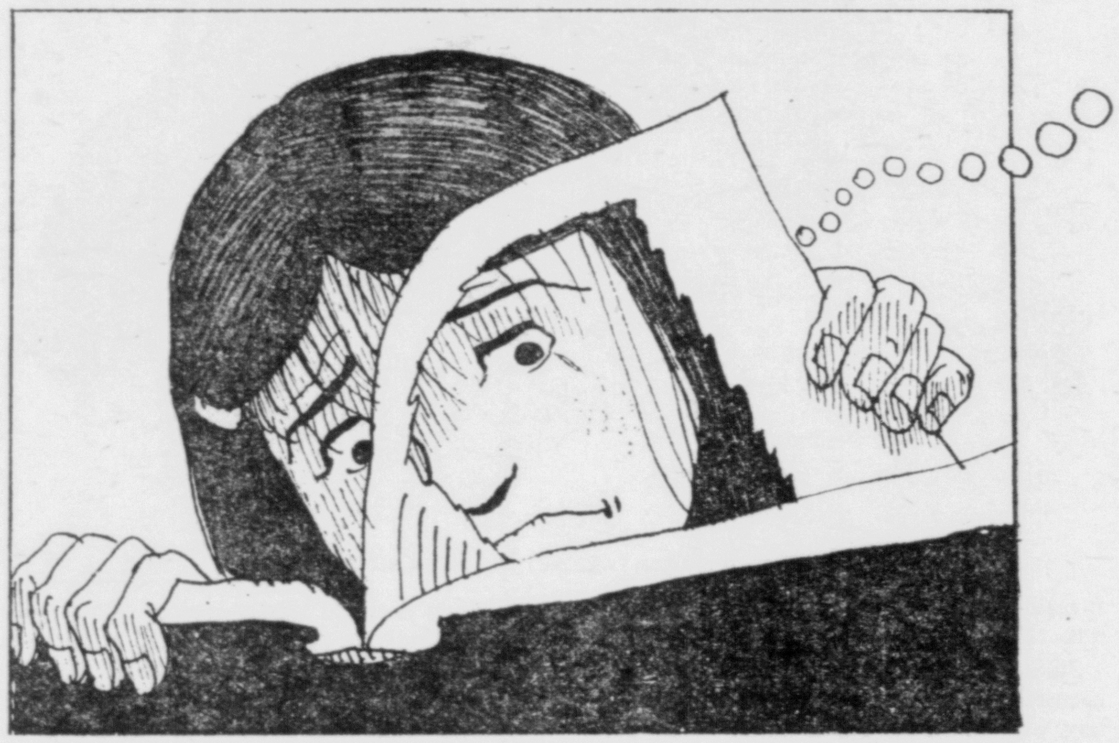
For the young set:

Picture books and easy readers to make them smile, help them learn

Books for pre-schoolers and early readers must be special. To capture the fancy of an age-group with a notoriously low attention span, they need to be lively, interesting and captively illustrated. Here is a sampling of books on the market that you and your small fry might find fascinating.

Reviews by Dorothy Oliver



An illustration from 'Something Queer at the Library'

FOX EYES by Margaret Wise Brown (Pantheon, $5.95).

If you read the books of Margaret Wise Brown in your childhood you will surely want to acquaint your children with her gentle, vivid stories. Pantheon has re-issued the late author's "Fox Eyes" coupling her classic prose with the soft, color-washed drawings of Garth Williams.

"Fox Eyes" can be read in one bedtime story sitting and it is sure to become a favorite of the listener. It is the story of a clever little fox who spies on the small forest creatures, making them nervous that this crafty animal has found them in their hiding places. What happens when the day's spying is done and dark night falls on the forest? Miss Brown added a surprise ending that will delight the storyteller as much as the audience.

SOMETHING QUEER AT THE LIBRARY by Elizabeth Levy (Delacorte, $5.95, ages 6-9).

Choose "Something Queer at the Library" for a child capable of reading this funny, funny story about two young girls intent on solving the mystery-of-the-cut-up-library-books. Another in Elizabeth Levy's "Something Queer" series, this book will keep young Sherlocks giggling from beginning to end. Mordicai Gerstein deserves equal credit for the success of this marvelous book. His cartoon-like drawings are priceless. If we were rating, this book would pull four stars.

NOEL THE COWARD by Robert Kraus (Windmill Books, $7.95, ages 3-7).

You can't help falling in love with the kangaroo-like creatures in "Noel The Coward." Little yellow Noel and his autumn-orange father are cowards through and through. Others pick on them, call them names and tease them because they are so vulnerable. Father and son decide it's time to learn to defend themselves and after attending Charlie's School of Self Defense discover how to shed their old image. Vivid illustrations by Jose Aruego and Ariane Dewey will make this a favorite with small children.

IF I WERE A HORSE by Elizabeth Bridgman (Dodd, Mead, $5.95, ages 3-6).

Jenny daydreams about being a horse and comes to the realization that, although it might be adventurous for a while, it is far better to be Jenny. Elizabeth Bridgman lets Jenny's fantasies fly in "If I Were A Horse," which she also illustrated in charming, simple drawings. Jenny thinks of what it would be like to go to school as a horse, go to a birthday party as a horse and even visit Grandmother in her new form, prompting Grandmother to remark, "Jenny, my how you have grown." A short, humorous tale for animal loving wee folk.

A CHRISTMAS PANORAMA illuminated by Virginia Parsons (Doubleday, $5.95, ages 5 to 8).

The treasured Christmas carols, The Friendly Beasts and A Partridge in a Pear Tree, have been combined with brilliant illustrations in "A Christmas Panorama." The medieval artistry of Virginia Parsons is complimented by calligraphy by Sheila Waters making this an unusual and lovely holiday gift.

GOODBYE FUNNY DUMPY-LUMPY by Bernard Waber (Houghton Mifflin, $6.95).

Bernard Waber has created a sensitive, thought-provoking book for young children with "Good-bye Funny Dumpy-Lumpy." This is nothing new for the author, who has brought messages to young readers with such books as "But Names Will Never Hurt Me" and "Nobody Is Perfect." In "Goodbye" the messages are carried by a family of turn-of-the-century cats, a wise father, loving mother and three perfectly normal children. In each vignette the children are confronted with some of the same situations today's children confront: sibling rivalry, indecision, wanting to be "like everybody." With the help of their parents, the three survive life's little problems and the reader benefits from their experiences.

IT'S SO NICE TO HAVE A WOLF AROUND THE HOUSE by Harry Allard (Doubleday, $5.95, ages 6-8).

What's this? A wolf posing as a German Shepherd in order to secure a job as a companion to an old man and his even older pets? Could it be a modern day Little Red Riding Hood tale where the trusting old man and his feeble cat, dog and fish wind up in the nasty wolf's stomach? Evanston native, author Harry Allard would never concoct such a morbid take-off. He's into fantasy and "It's So Nice To Have A Wolf Around The House" is one of the funniest fantasies on the market. Picture an absolutely charming wolf, a former bank robber who is trying to go straight, winning the hearts and giving new meaning to the lives of a household of old fogeys. The story is delightful from beginning to end and James Marshall's illustrations add to the pleasure.

THORN ROSE OR THE SLEEPING BEAUTY by the Brothers Grimm (Bradbury, $6.95, ages 4-7).

It is the beautiful illustrations by Errol LeCain more than anything that will make you want to pick up a copy of the classic fairy tale "Thorn Rose." The Brothers Grimm story of a lovely young princess who pricks her finger on a spindle and falls into a deep sleep for a hundred years, has been left in tact by the publishers. And the magic of this fantasy comes to life with LeCain's strikingly colorful art.

THE BRAVEST BABYSITTER by Barbara Greenberg (Dial, $5.95, ages 4-8).

Expect to hear great things about Barbara Greenberg. If her first book, "The Bravest Babysitter" is any indication of what's to come this talented writer will be stealing rave reviews throughout her career. Lisa's favorite babysitter is Heather. Heather "liked to read books aloud, and she laughed hard at the silly parts and made her voice spooky for the scary parts. She was good at drawing and she called Lisa 'Lis.' " But this night's babysitting venture was different. A raging thunderstorm scared Heather out of her wits and a sensitive, caring Lisa wound up sitting for her sitter. A lovely story all around with beautiful illustrations by Diane Paterson.

CHRISTMAS HERE, THERE AND EVERYWHERE by Frank Jupo (Dodd, Mead, $5.50, ages 5-9).

If there is a child on your list who is a storyteller — who is always the first to volunteer for show and tell — "Christmas Here, There and Everywhere" is an ideal gift. Packed into each page of this slim volume are anecdotes, legends, customs and traditions of Christmas. You and your child will learn about the female equivalent of Santa Claus loved in Italy, how the customs or presents, decorated trees and special foods got started, why people of some lands hide their children's presents in the cellar and others hide them in boots or under trees. Children's author Frank Jupo, who illustrated this book with humorous, simple drawings, writes in a flowing style and leaves young and old readers fascinated by his tidbits of Christmas lore.

LONG AGO by Cyndy Szekeres (McGraw-Hill, $7.95, ages 5-7).

Contrary to the opinion of some small fry, the old days were not when mom and dad danced the jitterbug with the original regulars on American Bandstand. People existed even before that and Cyndy Szekeres brings those bygone days to life in "Long Ago." Substituting animals for people, Szekeres re-creates the era of the settlers, explaining how illnesses were treated with herbs and home remedies, what it truly means to cook "from scratch," and how people survived without the luxury of electricity, gas, and indoor plumbing. Szekeres' warm, colorful illustrations compliment an already fine book.

SLIM GOODBODY: THE INSIDE STORY by John Burstein (McGraw-Hill, $4.95 softcover, ages 5-7).

Don't be turned away by the cover of "Slim Goodbody." This is not a sex education manual but rather a fascinating book about your body — "a garden of growing muscle, skin and bone you need plenty of love and care, good times, good food, fresh air to grow up healthy, strong and free and be the best that you can be." John Burstein is Slim Goodbody, the smiling man in a body suit designed to show off vital organs, muscles, bones and nerves. Flip through the book and you'll find simple, understandable explanations on how the body operates. By the last page you'll feel as though you just attended a pep rally for the health squad for not only does "Slim Goodbody" explain how you work, he is a one man cheerleader for keeping healthy, eating the right foods, getting enough sleep and exercising regularly. Three cheers for the body.

A FOREST CHRISTMAS by Mayling Mack Holm (Haper and Row, $5.95, ages 4-8).

Of course animals have a Christmas. What child could doubt that the furry forest creatures, decked out in their finest, gather on Christmas Eve for a holiday party at the home of Mrs. Rabbit. And if they didn't believe it before Mayling Mack Holm's short but sweet story, "A Forest Christmas" will convince them. Holm's finely detailed black and white illustrations will capture the fancy of the youngest child, who just may dream of rabbits with fiddles and mice eating Christmas pudding rather than sugarplums this Christmas.

LITTLE OTTER REMEMBERS by Ann Tompert (Crown, $6.95, ages 5-8).

Beginning readers will have little trouble with the three tales of little otter and his mother and they might just come away from these stories with a better understanding of themselves. Little Otter embodies many of the characteristics of his five to eight year old audience. He can be forgetful; tears fill his eyes when he is disappointed; it can be difficult for him to admit he is wrong and easy for him to think of himself first and

I BEEN THERE by Carol Hall (Doubleday, $5.95, ages 6-8).

In "I Been There," author Carol Hall presents a small black boy who has his doubts on whether man has ever been to the moon. Despite the assurances of his friends, the young boy has trouble in believing something he has never seen. Then, with the help of a quiet evening and his imagination, the boy takes his own trip into outer space. It is a journey filled with rainbow colored rocks, old ruins and a nineteen-foot-tall monster. After several harrowing experiences and a quick game of basketball, the young boy boards a bus for home. The illustrations by Sammis McLean will capture the fancy of both parents and children. The story was conceived of by Northern J. Calloway, better known for his role of "David" on Sesame Street.

THE UPSIDE-DOWN MAN by Russell Baker (McGraw-Hill, $6.95, ages 8-10).

Monsters, mad scientists and a dark spooky village are the setting for Russell Baker's "The Upside-Down Man," a story loosely based on the legend of Frankenstein. In Baker's version, Dr. Frankenstein seeks out the Village of Skar, a mountain village where days are always dark and nights are filled with thunder and lightning. With the help of his assistant Lazlo, the bumbling boy, he creates an upside-down man who moos. King Zugg the Third, ruler of Delirium, decrees that the scientist make three million of the creatures for use as weapons against his enemies. In the resulting confusion, Lazlo bumbles through the creation of a woman with cow's ears, a move which almost proves fatal to all parties. Eventually, Lazlo and the two misfits band together and find happiness in the land of serenity. While the book is aimed at children ages 8 to 10 years, parents will be caught up with the text and with the illustrations by Gahan Wilson.

CRICKET BOY by Feenie Ziner (Doubleday, $6.95, ages 8-10).

Another book aimed at the younger set is "Cricket Boy," a retellng of an old Chinese fable by author Feenie Ziner. The book tells the story of the poor scholar Hu and his son Hu Sing, who collect and raise fighting crickets. Hu and his crickets are summoned by Emperor Hwie Jung, who wishes to put his crickets against those of the poor scholar. Shortly before his departure, however, Hu discovers both his son and prized cricket dead. The spirit of the boy returns in the form of a cricket and defeats the Emperor's crickets, bringing fame to his father's household. The illustrations by Ed Young are simple but elegant in their recreation of Chinese art and add to the flavor of the story.

THE LEATHERMAN by Dick Gackenbach (Seabury, $6.95, ages 7-10).

In "The Leatherman," Dick Gackenbach recreates the flavor of another era, the America of the 1880s. Based on a real-life figure who roamed the woods of Connecticut, "The Leatherman" describes an encounter between a curious young boy and an eccentric wanderer. The young boy, Ben, is at first scared of the mysterious traveler who appears in his town every thirty-four days. After a brief glimpse of the man's past, the boy comes to understand a little of the story behind the stranger's endless journey. The book is illustrated with pen and ink drawings by the author.

COME TO THE EDGE by Julia Cunningham (Pantheon, $4.95, ages 8-10).

Julia Cunningham's "Come to the Edge" recounts the tale of Gravel Winter, a young boy who has been abandoned at a foster farm by his alcoholic father. Surrounded by the sterile environment of the institution, the boy withdraws into a shell except for a friendship with another boy named Skin. When Skin disappears without warning, Gravel runs away from the farm. His journey is a solitary one until he is befriended by a sign painter, an elderly man and two lonely women. Through their kindness, he once again learns to trust others and to value himself. Younger readers may need help with the text.

A VERY YOUNG RIDER by Jill Krementz (Knopf, $8.95, ages 8 and older).

"A Very Young Rider" by Jill Krementz is the next best thing to owning a pony. With words and photographs, Ms Krementz shows the daily reality of ten-year-old Vivi Malloy and her pony Ready Penny. The mundane chores — feeding, grooming, mucking the stall — are depicted in much detail. Young readers also follow Vivi as she practices equitation, basic dressage and jumping and as she competes in horse shows. And it details her sorrow when she becomes too big for the pony she loves and watches as Penny is sold to a new family. "A Young Rider" is a book that can be enjoyed by horse lovers of any age.

A SUMMER TO DIE by Lois Lowry (Houghton Mifflin, $6.95).

Thirteen-year-old Meg is envious of her older sister, Molly, a poised blond beauty who is always full of joyful enthusiasm. Like any other sisters, Molly and Meg have their fights but underneath runs a current of love. Then, Molly becomes sick and Meg's world begins collapsing as she realizes her sister is dying. Ms. Lowry depicts with poignancy the mixed feelings of anger and sorrow that the young girl feels at the impending death of her sister.

THE WHITMAN KICK by Robert Burch (Dutton, $6.95, ages 11-14).

"The Whitman Kick" by Robert Burch is the story of a teenager's troubled junior year in high school in the months before Pearl Harbor. Alan Ponder's life seems to be crumbling around him. First, his mother runs off to live with another man and then his closest friend Amanda rejects him for another boy. After much hurt and sorrow, Alan learns to live with the flaws of the people he loves.

THE LONG WAY DOWN by Robb White (Doubleday, $5.95, ages 8 and older).

Circus life and circus people are the subjects of "The Long Way Down," a book by Robb White. It is the story of Tina, a homeless young girl, who finds happiness and love with a young circus performer, Danny York. The book recounts Tina's experiences as she learns the pain, fear and joys of the trapeze artist.

CAPTAIN GREY by Avi (Pantheon, $5.95).

Kevin Cartwright is taken prisoner in a raid in which his father is killed and his sister disappears. It is 1783, and the Mysterious Captain Grey is terrorizing the coast of New Jersey. Forced to become a member of the pirate's company, Kevin learns all that he can of the captain's business. He studies the art of guns and boats, all the while plotting revenge. Kevin's story is vividly recounted in "Captain Grey," an adventure novel by Avi.

For the young adult:

Good writers blend fact and fantasy to produce some quality fiction

At least six adults know how to please young teens. These six are good writers as well. They are as adept at translating Shakespeare as they are at translating a 13-year-old's first romance. With a skillful blend of fact and fantasy, they have created a quality mix of young adult fiction.

SILVER ON THE TREE by Susan Cooper (Atheneum, $7.95)

This is a well-written book for well-read children. The final volume in a five-book series, "Silver on the Tree" concerns a group of English and Welsh children battling the Dark.

The Dark is a threatening evil power that can only be fought with the aid of Will Stanton and his friends. These children have extraordinary powers that allow them to travel back to ancient times. They also are intelligent in their own right, literary enough to nickname their parents the A.P.s — Aged Parents (remember Dickens?).

Susan Cooper already has received the Newbery Award for "The Grey King," the fourth book in this series. "Silver on the Tree" is no letdown. It provides a stirring climax to the earlier adventures of these remarkable children.

THE ICE IS COMING by Patricia Wrightson (Atheneum, $5.95)

Patricia Wrightson also chooses fantasy — of the present in far-off Australia. Her tale is told by a young Aboriginal man, Wirrun.

While Wirrun is off on his quest to fight the dreaded ice creatures, the Ninya, he also tells a lot about the Happy Folk. The Happy Folk are blithely ignoring nature's warnings of the ice. They only become concerned when the unusual cold spell threatens to hurt the tourism trade at the beaches.

Wirrun is joined on his quest by a strange assortment of creatures — from the wispy Mimi, who travels through rock, to the tiny, but tough, Wa-tha-gun-darl.

The tale may be fantasy, but the plot is believable — especially if another unusually cold winter is on its way here.

JULIA AND THE HAND OF GOD by Eleanor Cameron (Dutton, $6.95)

Despite the title, "Julia" is not a religious book. It is, however, a realistic book.

Julia likes growing up in Berkeley, Calif. in the 1920s. She especially likes her Uncle Hugh in San Francisco, and she likes talking to him about earthquakes.

Julia's imagination, though, gets her into trouble. When she convinces her next-door neighbor that they should cremate a mouse, it is the beginning of all kinds of hardships.

Julia, like some of the other fictional children, is not average. Not only does she have a big imagination, Julia wants to become a writer. She cannot cope with her friend's lack of admiration for such a goal.

" 'I hate writing. Imagine wanting to.'

" 'Well, I do,' said Julia fiercely . . .'I'm going to be an author someday like my father and Louisa May Alcott.'

" 'Who's she?' said Maisie. Julia examined her with disgust."

Kids like Maisie probably would not like this book. Kids like Julia will.

RONNIE AND ROSEY by Judie Angell (Bradbury Press, $6.95)

Ronnie and Rosey live in the 1970s, in a suburb of New York. But lack of fantasy does not make this story dull.

For being a new kid in junior high is a big enough adventure. Ronnie makes friends right away — from "Rosey" the boy who runs into her in the hall, to Evelyn, who tries to avoid climbing ropes in gym class.

Ronnie copes with growing up in the suburbs in all the usual ways. She worries about what to wear to the Halloween party and whether or not Miss Fisk is dating Mr. Vincent.

But her father's sudden death makes life more complicated. All of a sudden, Ronnie's mother is limiting phone calls to ten minutes and not allowing Ronnie to see her friends so much.

There is nothing phony about Judie Angell's teenage story. She concentrates on developing her characters, rather than relying on teen-age slang to tell the story.

FAVORITE TALES FROM SHAKESPEARE by Bernard Miles (Rand, McNally and Co., $7.95)

Bernard Miles calls this "a family book. Parents can read it to children, children can read it to parents, parents and children can read it to each other or to themselves and perhaps, most important of all, tiny children can enjoy the pictures."

Even a Shakespeare purist could not protest too much over these delightful versions of MacBeth, Romeo and Juliet, A Midsummer Night's Dream, Hamlet and Twelfth Night.

Rather than spoil Shakespeare, Bernard Miles will make reading the real thing all the more palatable.

Colorful illustrations by Victor G. Ambrus are interspersed throughout the stories. While Miles writes the tales in everyday language, he does not neglect all the Shakespeare language puns. In "Romeo and Juliet," Miles explains the pun the wounded Mercutio speaks as he dies, "Ask for me tomorrow and you shall find me a grave man."

Top off this book with a live Shakespeare production and the Bard is sure to be a favorite.

CASTLE by David Macauley (Houghton Mifflin Co., $8.95)

"Castle" is a coffee-table book for children. David Macauley, an award-winning storyteller and illustrator, tells you everything you want to know about castles in his most recent book.

Macauley uses the fictional Kevin le Strange as the lord of this castle. Although the lord and his castle are imaginary, their story is based on research of real castles.

Detailed drawings show step-by-step construction of the castle. From the castle's toilets to towers, illustrations and crisp text tell of the amazing castle building feats between 1277 and 1305.

Besides disclosing the structure of castle walls, Macauley tells of the conquest of Wales. Merchants and craftsmen settle within the castle walls and eventually Welsh families settle nearby.

Through the fictional town of Aberwyvern, Macauley brings fascinating facts to life.

CLIMBING TO THE SUN by Jeffrey Carroll (Seabury, $6.95)

Reviewed by Leah Collister

Three goats, Tum Lum, the old one; Seo, the doe and Jum Jsoy, the son of Tum Lum, the tribe leader, find themselves caught in an avalanche. They struggled against the avalanche but finally it was over and they were at the bottom of the mountain. They were afraid because they were in the valley and it was strange to them. Their only purpose now was to get back to their mountain tribe and home.

The three goats were faced by a bear. Tum -Jsoy charged the bear and wounded it, the bear responded by piercing Tum Tsoy with his paw. After that Tum Lum charged at the bear and wounded him again. The bear tried to grab him but only succeeded in getting his paw caught on Tum Lums horn and tearing his own skin. The enraged bear chased the goats into the valley. After they had left the bear behind the goats stopped to rest by a river.

While they rested, two hunters, a boy and his father, approached. As they crept towards them the goats spotted them and fled. When the goats were ahead of the hunters, Tum Lum fell down exhausted. The other two moved on compelled by the scent of danger. Tum Lum struggled to get up, walked a few feet off the trail and collapsed.

Meanwhile, Seo and Tum Tsoy made their way up the mountain. The hunters passed where Tum Lum was and went on after the other goats. They were slowing down because of Tum Tsoys wounds, so the hunters caught up with them quickly. The hunters saw them and shot Tum Tsoy, so Seo went on alone and found the tribe.

When Tum Lum got up he started up again with the same urge to get home, but this time he went more slowly. He saw a boy whose name was Kwaya. Kwaya had great respect for Tum Lum. The boy even brought some food for him. Tum Lum was afraid, but he was even more afraid as he saw a bear coming towards him. Kwaya knew that he would have to defend the goat, so he threw his canteen at the bear, which cut his nose, and the bear left.

Then Tum Lum started out for his home on the mountain. He climbed the treacherous paths to the top — to his home.

"Climbing to the Sun" is a simple story of animals struggling to survive against the forces of nature and man. The story has many vivid descriptions, but it doesn't seem to have any real meaning. It is just a simple story with a simple plot and if it had more of a meaning this reviewer missed it.

THE DESERTER by Nigel Gray (Harper Row, $7.95)

Reviewed by Mark Staudocher

The story, "The Deserter," written by Nigel Gray, tells about four kids, Andy, Christine, Terry and Lucy and their adventures with a deserter from the British army. They met Dave, the soldier, in an abandoned house, where the children went to play. Dave was hiding from the police, who were trying to send him back to the army.

While Dave was trying to escape from the police he tripped and sprained his ankle, so he was unable to walk. Dave explained to the children why he wanted to escape. He told them why he didn't like to tear apart houses and kill people. The children felt sorry for him and decided to help him escape. They supplied him with food for several days. When someone discovered his hiding place, they had to move him to a safer place. They transported him on a raft, down the rapids, to an island called Treasure Island.

The next day, Andy's and Christine's family took Terry and Lucy to the island. After Andy's and Christine's parents discovered Dave he told them his story so they decided to help him. They put him on a train for England. A few years later they still didn't hear from him, they wondered if he had gotten caught by the police and sent back to the army or something.

I liked this story because it had a lot of suspense and excitement. I liked the friendship between Dave and the kids, because the kids could tell Dave their problems and Dave could tell them his problems and secrets. I didn't like parts of the story that were dull. I liked to listen to a soldier's point of view of what he thought of the army.

The book didn't tell the location of where the event happened. The ending would have been better if it had included information on what happened to Dave after they sent him on a train to England.

This is the first story I've read where kids are such good friends that they even consider themselves blood brothers and sisters. I liked when the kids parents were so understanding of the friendship of Dave and the kids and wanted to help him so that he wouldn't get caught by the police and sent back to the army prison.

The pictures in the story helped me to picture in my mind what the story was really like. Reading the story made me wish I was with the children on their adventure with Dave. I would like to read another story that has excitement like this story.

Science fiction . .

THE CAGE by Roy Brown (Seabury, $6.95).

Reviewed by Tanya Sullivan

Science-fiction? Mystery? Suspense? All this is definitely in "The Cage."

The plot is excellent! It is intriguing to see the characters wonder about what is happening, sometimes sharing their ideas, and sometimes forming their own explanation of the strange occurrences. Each character certainly has his own personality, no two are even closely similar. This factor adds to the excitement in the story.

A great surprise to the reader occurs when Bainbridge is found to be connected with the outside world. It is most interesting when he contemplates his position in the "experimentees." What also makes the plot top notch is that the reader does not get any clues or ideas before the characters involved do and so there is a constant urge to read on and find out what happens next.

The ending is rather thrilling; it keeps the reader wondering what actually did happen to those strange characters wandering about in their "fugue state."

The book is a good length. The print is a nice size and easily read, although in some parts it did become unclear. The number of each chapter is especially attractive.

The vocabulary is quite advanced. I would recommend the book for ages 13 and up. However, for a 13-year-old the book would be quite a challenge.

I found the book very engrossing. From the first page to the last my attention was held. I certainly could read it again without getting bored. I really don't have anything to say against the book. It was truly enjoyable.

SILAS AND CON by A. C. Stewart (Atheneum, $5.95).

Reviewed by Gordon Greb

The main character in "Silas and Con" is Silas, who was an abandoned boy. He was brave, scared, imaginative and helpless. Tip, who was a toy monkey, was found by Silas on the top of a rubbish pile. He was cute and furry, too. Con, who was a stray dog, was found on the corner of Connaught Place. He was mopey and stubborn at times. times.

Silas ran away because his stepfather was beating him. The first person that they met was an old tinker woman. She fell in love with Tip and held the boy's hands tight. She chased them when they ran away from her and finally they escaped her.

Then Silas traveled to a small farm. It was comfortable and pleasant. There were nice fields and the hospitality was great. Silas slept in an old-fashined bed and got homemade soup. He started working.

I liked the story because the characters and different situations were interesting. In my opinion, the book showed companionship and what true friendship is all about. Also, the struggle throughout the whole story showed what little kids can do if they put their minds to it. It also showed what kids my age should be doing, or start to do, such as working for things like money and going to school and learning.

Also, I think that most of the struggles and situations were real to life, such as running away, working on a farm, or wandering around alone. I think that a small boy could live on an island and find a toy and a stray dog.

"The Luck of Brin's Five" is a book set in the year 275 after our time. Each family is to have five Moruians and a luck. A luck is a wounded Moruian and the family couldn't survive without a luck.

This story is about the family Brin's Five. They had a luck named Odd Eye but he was dying and they had to find a new luck. They found one just as Odd Eye died.

They had taken Odd Eye out on their sled because he couldn't walk. All of a sudden this big white tent comes falling down from the sky. In this bag was a person, which they had never seen before. He was a man. They saw that his hand was burned and his forehead cut. They decided to name him Diver.

A lot of Moruians had seen his tent fall from the sky and they thought it was a devil so they, Brin's Five, had to run. Brin's Five found his space ship and fixed it.

Diver flew in a contest with it and won, but this was after they sailed from where they lived.

After Diver won the contest three of Brin's Five were captured because they wanted the "Devil". Dorn, Brin and Diver, the only ones left of Brin's Five found the others and got them home safely.

Then when they thought it was all over, Dorn and Diver were captured. After a while they were freed when the leader found that Diver was no "Devil" and that he came in peace. Then there were no more captures or fights.

THE SOLID GOLD KID by Norma Fox Mazer and Harry Mazer (Delacourte, $6.95).

Reviewed by Michael M. Lichter

Many children of millionaires constantly live in fear of being kidnapped. "The Solid Gold Kid" by Norma Fox Mazer and Harry Mazer is a story of what takes place in the six days when teenagers, Derek, Pam, Wendy, Ed and Jeff, who have nothing in common, were held captive by Bogie and Pearl, two ruthless kidnappers. The main character, Derek, is the solid gold kid, because his father is a self-made millionaire who is willing to spend money for his son's return. Bogie and Pearl don't care about their hostages; their only care is the ransom money for Derek.

One rainy Saturday, while leaving school, the five kids are waiting for a bus which is late. Derek is talking to Pam at the bus stop when a van comes up and all five kids hitch a ride and hop in. It doesn't occur to Derek that he has walked into his own kidnapping. To Bogie and Pearl who are driving the van, their plan of kidnapping Derek is going better than they had though except for one thing. They had only wanted to kidnap Derek alone — not five hapless kids.

After realizing that they are being kidnapped, and trying a futile escape, the children give up hope. The kids are all getting bound and tied up in an old house. Here the authors really make the reader feel the kids' misery and discomfort.

Through Derek's thoughts, the authors express the kind of person Bogie is. Bogie is crazy and seems willing to kill the kids at any time.

After staying in the shack for 24 terrifying hours, the hostages are led through the chilly forest air to an old boathouse. Here the kids try unsuccessfully to burn themselves out to freedom. Bogie and Pearl then take the partially burned kids to an old fire tower.

If you think this is bad, on the way to the tower Pam tries to escape but is shot by Pearl; Wendy, who is determined to escape, gets them all out of the fire tower but Bogie catches both Derek and Ed. Wendy and Jeff get away but are shot. The suspense builds further when the kidnappers leave Ed to die in an old junkyard.

The authors, Norma Fox Mazer and Harry Mazer, have gotten together to write a story about a frightening six-day experience out of which comes courage and friendship.

The ending of "The Solid Gold Kid" will shock and surprise you. The story could be enjoyed by both teenagers and adults, but I believe teenagers would enjoy it more.

THE FARAWAY ISLAND by Barbara Corcoran (Atheneum, $6.95)

"The Faraway Island" is a book written about the Grenville family. Mr. Grenville was offered a job in Belgium. His daughter, Lynn, would go to Nantucket to live with her grandmother.

When Lynn arrived on the island, she could not find her grandmother. Lynn realized that her grandmother didn't have a good memory. Dr. Ault gave Lynn a ride to the house. Her grandmother said she was sorry for forgetting that she was coming.

The next week, Lynn told her grandmother that she was going to school. Lynn didn't go for two months. Her grandmother didn't remember if she went or not. Lynn tried telling her grandmother, but she wouldn't listen.

One day, Dr. Ault came to visit Lynn and her grandmother. He asked Lynn how she liked school. At that moment, Lynn told her grandmother that she hadn't gone. Her grandmother was a little shocked that she hadn't gone. Two weeks later, Lynn enrolled into a school. Her grandmother was no longer upset and they lived happily in Nantucket.

I thought that "The Faraway Island" was a well written book. I would encourage other students to read this book. I think that they would enjoy it because there was no violence in it.

THE HUNDRED ISLANDS by Mavis Thorpe Clark (MacMillan, $6.95).

Reviewed by Mark Ziekert

"The Hundred Islands" is a smooth flowing adventure probably most enjoyable for early teens. It is a good book for nature-lovers since the story takes place on one of Australia's hundred islands where the book gets its name.

The main character is Greg Benson, a young man of 18 or so, who wants to save all the wildlife and the land they live on in spite of his father's plans to tear it up. Greg first wants to study environmental science at the university but his father refuses him bluntly and wants him to stay and work on the farm in addition to help destroy what Greg wants to save.

Finally after long arguments Greg leaves home for good. Needing money desperately (as to earn money for college) Greg illegally joins his best friend in diving for abalone in the treacherous waters of the bass strait. Yet no one can realize his love for the wild creatures or the scope of Greg's vision of the future or share his struggle to achieve it.

As a fierce and raging storm engulfs the islands the story moves into a compelling climax. Greg makes a decision for the future, risking rejection by the woman he loves, Jenny, who also shares in his love of the islands.

Although I've never heard of author Mavis Thorpe Clarke she is very famous in Australia and will soon make herself known in the U.S. as well.

"The Other Michael" is a book about a special relationship between Michael and his grandmother. Through their special relationship, Michael learns to accept himself in spite of his mother's and father's disapproval.

Michael always wanted to be a good musician. He played the piano and the guitar. He wanted very much to take lessons but his mother and father said no, because he was taking baseball lessons instead.

Michael's grandmother kept on filling his head with nonsense: like if you sing and talk to flowers you will make them grow. There were other things like having an elephant in her back yard.

Now this grandma wasn't just any ordinary grandma. She was very kind. She lived in a house all by herself. Her house was surrounded with bamboo trees. She had a very large garden that grew everything from vegetables to fruits.

This story is kind of hard to get into at first. But when you get going I'm sure you will enjoy it.

She would cross her arms and legs and just by wishing, could transport herself and the five Madder children to places whose names began with the first letters of their names.

The story unfolds as they travel to places of their choice and find fun and adventure at every destination.

Mary Towne, the author of the book, makes the story believable, even though the characters jump from the real world into a land of imagination and then right back again.

If you like to travel, but are too young to leave home alone, use "Goldenrod" as your ticket to the world of fun and adventure.

THE DARK SIDE OF THE MOON by William Corlett (Bradbury, $6.95).

Reviewed by Paul Schaefer

This book, written by William Corlett, is a story about a 16-year-old student who was kidnapped from a school in Edinburgh, Scotland.

It is also the story of an American astronaut and his trip to the "Dark Side of the Moon."

These two stories are about different characters who do not know each other and their adventures are not related.

The main story is about David Mason, a third year student at Ruggles academy. It all starts when David, in his first year at Ruggles, finds Roger Carter in his study shaking with fear. David tells the chaplain, Mr. Jessop to go to Roger's study and he does so. Mr. Jessop discovers that Roger is on drugs and he involves two other boys, Simon Eccles and Paul Lanyon. These three boys, are then expelled from school by the headmaster. They are so ashamed that they run away and even their parents don't know where they went.

On his way to a sports event David is knocked out and kidnapped. The next day a note is found on the doorstep of the headmasters, saying David had been kidnapped. The police are then called and from there on Detective Chief Inspector Wormsley takes the case. After interviewing many students and teachers he finds out that David was the one who found out about the drugs. Now the inspector's suspicions are aroused so he decides to interview the parents of the three boys.

It was proved that the inspector's suspicions were correct. The three boys did kidnap David, but they did not mean any harm to him and wanted no ransom money. They were only trying to get even with the school for taking something from them.

David managed to escape in a very heavy snowstorm. For several days he was lost and almost frozen. He finally found a line of telephone poles which he followed until he came to a public phone booth where he called for help and then was rescued.

The other shorter story was about the astronaut Major Wayne Andrews, who volunteered to substitute for another astronaut who was to fly to and study the dark side of the moon.

He was very anxious to take off on his journey to the moon, but while he was in flight he wondered why he ever left the earth, to go some place he didn't care about. They had problems with the mission so he had to return to earth. He was very happy to be back with his family.

JETHRO'S DIFFICULT DINOSAUR by Arnold Sungaard (Pantheon, $3.95).

Arnold Sundgaard has succeeded where so many others have failed. He has written a children's book in verse without damaging a clever story in an effort to make couplets rhyme. Instead "Jethro's Difficult Dinosaur" is enhanced by its format. Jethor happens upon an egg in Central Park that is ". . . the strangest egg I've ever seen — it's salmon pink and bottle green!" He takes it home, hatches it and convinces his parents to raise his prehistoric find despite the problem that ". . . when he walked he'd clink and clank, just like an ancient army tank." Stan Mack's illustrations are equally good, colorfully portraying a family's attempts to cope with their pet beast. It's a book that will leave a smile on your face. Be sure to share it with the kids.

IN THE SUICIDE MOUNTAINS by John Gardner (Knopf, $8.95).

Reviewed by Lori Ann Allen

John Gardner's, "In the Suicide Mountains," is a tale that can be enjoyed by all. John Gardner has created a mysterious and enchanting world, a world filled with beautiful maidens, fiery dragons, dwarfs and evil creatures. Tales are spun within tales; morals are presented within morals.

The world created "In The Suicide Mountains" is the setting for the chance meeting of four unique characters; Chudu the goat's son, a dwarf with magical powers, ghastly features and an evil reputation; Armida, the blacksmith's daughter, a beautiful young maiden and Prince Christopher, the sullen, a crowned prince of the kingdom, who is sent to the Suicide Mountains to kill the six-fingered man.

There in the Suicide Mountains, they encounter the Abbot of the Ancient Monastery. He who has the power to cure the sick and heal the wounded, teaches them that "things are not always as they seem, and has a secret, the most devastating of all.

Gardner has captured the true nature of his characters and enabled them to come to life. As you read, you lose all sense of being, and find yourself lost within the pages of the book, feeling with the characters and living the story.

The story moves at a rapid pace. Moments of suspense, drama and enchantment are interpersed within the tale. Gardner has created a magnificent blend of these three elements, resulting in a superbly written story.

The plot thickens as each of the characters' secrets are revealed. The book reaches its ultimate climax as the Abbot of the Ancient Monastery's secret is uncovered. It is a secret that affects all characters, but the author does not stop at the disclosure of this secret. He goes on to conclude the tale with one of the most pleasurable of fairy tale endings. It left me with a feeling of total satisfaction and enjoyment. After reading Gardner's "In The Suicide Mountains," you too may find out that things are not always as they seem.

Night photography

A proceding column made suggestions about taking the camera into night photography as a mobile, hand-held instrument and coping with the lower light levels by utilizing lens speed to the full and loading with high speed film such as Kodak Tri-X and Ilford HP5 for black and white, and Kodak High Speed Ektachrome Tungsten for color.

This is a neglected area of night photography and one very much worth pursuing for lively action and human interest photos under night conditions.

However, there is another area of night photography which is more static, does not have to concern itself with subject movement, can fall back on the reliability of a tripod for camera steadiness, and increase sharpness and detail by using slower, sharper, finer grain films, and smaller lens openings to utilize maximum possible lens sharpness.

Naturally we are talking about street scenes, buildings, even Christmas illuminations, in which the main interest is shape and structure, not people.

In color a decision must be made. Do you want true color or not? Using daylight type color film under artificial lighting will give much redder tones. This may not be important where faces are not concerned (if there are faces in a subject with daylight film under such conditions they will go so ruddy that they will all look like successful pork butchers of high blood pressure cases).

Use tungsten type color film for honest values, and this can be important in night scenes with snow. We don't want it to look like orange drink crystals from using daylight film.

A 125ASA black and white film is ideal. Take your meter reading as close as possible to the illuminated area for either color or black and white, or it may be working for the black areas which don't interest you.

Be sure your tripod doesn't vibrate. Many center-column types do. Use a long, soft cable release, not a stiff metal one, to eliminate risk of shake from your hand being transmitted to the camera. Have a means of timing the exposure. A small flashlight is better than your cigarette lighter for reading the second hand of your watch in a 30 second exposure, particularly on a windy night!

Make sure that your location is free from vibration too — for instance, if shooting from a bridge, traffic can cause camera blur. Shoot when traffic is nil, or put your hand in front of the lens until it has passed, picking up the exposure again from that point.

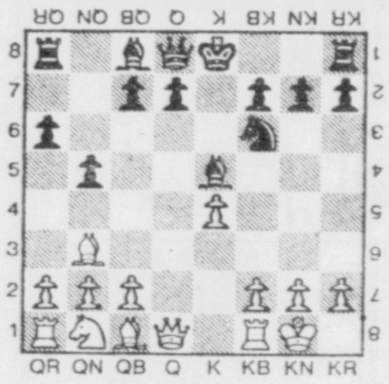
BEGINNER'S CORNER



BEGINNER'S CORNER — Hint and explanation: Drive the black piece into disarray.

Why the preeminence of Soviet chess?

The reason, no doubt, is the mass approach to the game which has prevailed in the U.S.S.R. since the late 1920s. Now some 2,800,000 adult chess players regularly take part in competition, while each year 5,000,000 school children play in children's tournaments. There is no village in the U.S.S.R. so small that a chess talent there will not be discovered!

But quantity is not enough. Therefore, the importance of the famous "Botvinnik school."

Three times a year 20 of the most promising boys and girls meet with Grandmaster Michael Botvinnik for an intense 10 days of training sessions. The students' strengths and weaknesses are diagnosed by the strict but kindly-humorous former world champion. Individually-tailored homework is then assigned for the next meeting.

"I don't interfere in the work of the local coaches," Botvinnik says. "I try to develop the young players' competitive qualities, and feeling of responsibility for their play, and psychological qualities."

And a former pupil, the current World Champion Anatoly Karpov attests: "The classes conducted by Botvinnik were very useful to me, especially the assignments he gave us to do at home. The assignments trained me to work independently. They made me delve into chess books."

Thus Botvinnik, who dominated world chess from 1946 to 1963 as World Champion, continues to be a fertile influence through his students.

We now present a recent 12-move victory from the Australian-U.S.S.R. Telechess Olympiad match by 14-year-old Gary Kasparov, who already has twice won the Soviet Junior Championship (under age 18)! Botvinnik, not surprisingly, has predicted a brilliant future for Gary.

One newspaper introduced the New York Times Magazine Crossword Puzzle to their readers by asking, "Is the New York Times crossword puzzle too hard for readers of the Jackson (Mich.) Citizen Patriot?" After introducing the prestigious puzzle — noted for its difficulty — to their readers they were besieged with letters, five complaints were called in the very next day and a reporter was assigned to do a public opinion poll to get reader reaction to the new feature.

Well, we know this puzzle is not too hard for readers of Leisure. Oh, yes there will be teeth gnashing and pencil chewing and many even a choice word or two but true crossword diehards will find it a never-ending challenge. One clue before you begin: each puzzle is titled and the title will help you find a series of answers.

Too hard for the readers of Leisure??? Never.

COOK WITH WINE

Good cooks the world over have been using wine to flavor their foods for hundreds of years. Many of the old recipes have become classics. They are worth every minute of the time it takes to chop innumerable ingredients, simmer slowly for hours and season intricately.

But a more imaginative approach to the use of wine with food is to experiment. Wine can turn any food into a dish that has sparkle and character. Frozen carrots simmered in sauterne and butter taste much better than carrots boiled in water. The addition of sherry transforms canned soup into a rich and aromatic menu item. Port turns raspberry flavored gelatin into a distinctively fresh dessert.

Wine is readily available and easy to use. It does not have to be cleaned, chopped, sliced, sauteed, etc. before you can use it. You simply measure it and pour it into or over the food. The alcohol evaporates during cooking to leave nothing but an overall enhancement of the food.

Dry white wines are generally more compatible with delicately flavored foods such as chicken, fish, cream soups and cream sauces. With robust foods such as beef, meat sauces, meat and vegetable soups, dry red wines are most often used. Rose' goes well with ham, veal and fruit. Use dessert wines such as port and cream sherry in desserts, dessert sauces and gelatin salads.

It's all Greek to Savalas

by Vernon Scott

Telly Savalas isn't an insomniac but he's getting only four hours sleep a night, thriving on a man-killing work load.

The bald actor toils at Universal Studios from dawn until dark as the star of CBS-TV's "Kojak" series. Thereafter he dashes off to Paramount to edit his new movies, "Mati," from 7 to 10 p.m."

He returns home and works on tapes of the film until 2 a.m. The alarm goes off at six and Savalas starts the cycle all over again.

Savalas' dedication to "Mati" is a personal matter. He wrote the script, directed and starred in the movie and now is stitching it together. Clear-eyed and energetic, Savalas slowed his hectic pace for an hour the other day during a lunch break in his Universal dressing room.

"It will be a sad day when I begin thinking of all this as work," he said. "I enjoy every minute of it.

"When I think about ditch-digging or a thousand other things I might be doing, it makes me appreciate how I earn my living."

"Mati" is based on the life of Telly's Uncle Katsos, an esteemed New York psychiatrist. Nephew Telly has admired Uncle Katsos since childhood and long entertained the notion of writing a screenplay about him.

Earlier this year he sat down and wrote the script in eight days. Then, in conjunction with Howard Kotch, Telly produced, directed and starred in the title role.

Savalas had no difficulty directing himself.

"I usually don't think when I act," he said. "It's an instinctive thing with me. I learn my lines, of course, but I don't plan a performance.

"On 'Kojak' I improvise a lot of the dialogue. And I've directed five episodes of the series so I've had some experience at it. The talent was given me at an early age. What the hell, I've been directing things since I was a year old.

"When I'm directing a scene that involves Telly I'm concerned with the other actors, not myself. Sometimes I'd like to be able to look over my shoulder and see what the other performers are doing. But if something goes wrong I just say, 'Cut. Let's do it again.'

"The other actors respond to me with affection and gratitude. They know Telly has been down that road. I work at keeping them relaxed. I try to get them to break out of their predictable molds.

"When I'm editing the picture I really don't watch myself. Oh, sometimes I see the character I play but even in 'Kojak' I don't see Telly. I keep an eye on the other actors.

"Acting is the least enjoyable facet of what I'm doing. But I'm not all that dedicated to directing or producing either. Fate has a lot of different things in store for all of us, and I go with whatever comes along."

Savalas anticipates no confusion between the Greek cop he plays in "Kojak" and the Greek doctor in "Mati."

"If I've got a choice of playing an ethnic role," he said, "why not go to the purest classic form. Hellenish is the only criteria for excellence."

Telly is an ardent, chauvinistic Greek if ever there was one. He spouts the glories of ancient Greece with the zeal of an oracle.

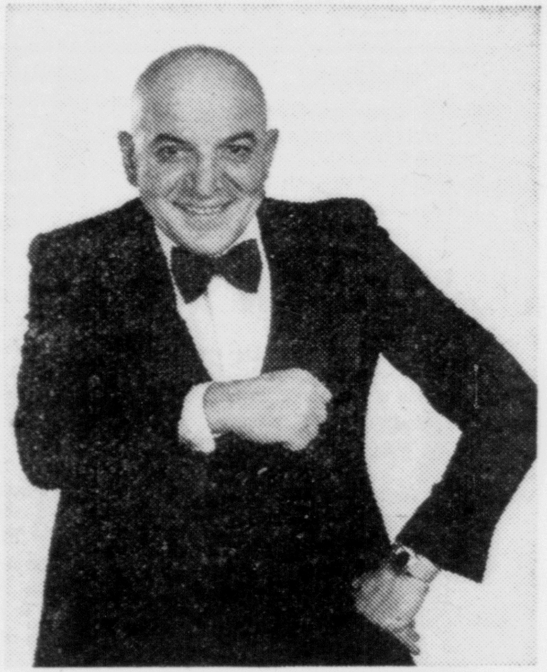
Example: "You learn French to speak to Frenchmen or German to speak to Germans. But if you want to speak to God you learn Greek."

former school teacher Savalas launched into a brief lecture on religion, philosophy, science and literature quoting everyone from Homer to Aristotle (for whom he was named) to pericles.

"No one has ever asked me to play a Greek," he said. "So I insist on it myself, I did an episode of 'Combat' 15 years ago and refused to play the character of a colonel unless they made him a Greek.

"That show still is played on Greek television every Easter and on Greek independence day. I'm very proud of that.

"People won't equate Kojak with the doctor in the film. Kojak is a product of the New York streets. The doctor was born in Greece and is a man of simplicity and innocence.



Telly Savalas stars as Lt. Theo Kojak in the fast-paced CBS adventure series "Kojak" at 9 p.m. Sunday on Channel 2.

"One day Uncle Katsos told me that after 50 years in psychiatry he concluded the only defence against the logic of madness is love — and that's what inspired my screenplay."

No one has seen "Mati" yet, nor does Savalas have a distributor for the film. He's keeping it under wraps until the editing is completed.
